This is San Francisco. Everything Grows. An 11,000 Barrel Well. Beyond Imagination.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1927.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 7.

THIS is written in San Francisco, the western gate to the United States. If you are fortunate, John McLaren, superintendent of parks for 40 years, now 80 years old, will show you San Francisco's park system, finest in the world, 41 parks in all.

SAN FRANCISCO has a happy combination. The president of its park commission is Herbert Fleishhacker, a banker who knows how to get money for parks, and McLaren a Scotchman, who knows how to spend it efficiently.

Golden Gate Park and Lincoln Park, two of the 41, could not be reproduced anywhere else on earth. Lincoln Park on a beautiful hill on the southern side of the Golden Gate, overlooks magnificent San Francisco bay on one side and on the other the Pacific, stretching toward Asia. This state and city offer opportunity to the whole world, and information on how to make human beings comfortable, and prosperous.

HERE, everything grows, fish in the sea, crops on the land, values in real estate, height of skyscraper buildings, deposits in banks, value of bank stocks, and newspaper circulation.

S. S. WHITE writes from Chicago: "You might like to see the enclosed copy of the 'Idaho Statesman' printed 40 years ago."

The "Statesman's" editorial page says, "W. R. Hearst, the California Senator's son, is making a decided success of his newspaper venture. When he took hold of the Examiner six months ago, it was a slow going, four page paper with about 20,000 circulation. He has doubled that already, works 14 hours a day and is said to have resolved to put in that amount of time until the paper reaches a circulation of 50,000."

J. A. CALLAHAN, the Examiner's general manager, tells you that last Sunday's net paid circulation was 379,614. George Hearst, W. R.'s son, and grandson of "the California Senator" is president of the paper now, and he has twins. What will San Francisco be, when they run "The Examiner?"

THE people here are cheerful, for good reasons. Mr. Kingsbury, president of Standard Oil of California, leaves a luncheon party early, going to look over new oil lands in Texas. They brought in a well there yesterday, producing 11,000 barrels a day, a mile from another well, brought in a few days ago, yielding 9,000 barrels. Oil is cheap, worth only 60 cents a barrel at the well. But those two wells could pay $17,000 a day, $4,380,000 a year, (they work on Sundays.) Four millions a year is something.

STANDARD OIL wisely looks ahead. Instead of using the 20,000 barrels a day, under the present oil market conditions, the wells will be held down to half their capacity, or less, and the oil conserved in the ground.

THE Republican party in December will select a convention city for 1928. It ought to select

Poison to Pirates

YANKEES NEED 1 GAME TO CLINCH SERIES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE, Staff Correspondent.

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 7. — The New York Yankees advanced to within one game of the world's baseball championship here this afternoon when they defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates for the third straight time. A crowd of 60,000 turned out to welcome the Yankees on their return from Pittsburgh, where they took the first two games of the series.

Manager Donie Bush presented a changed lineup, sending Hal Rhyne to second base in place of Grantham, who reported himself out of commission.

Lee Meadows and Herb Pennock were the opposing pitchers.

The game in detail follows:

FIRST INNING

PITTSBURGH—L. Waner up. Ball one. Strike one, called, fast ball. L. Waner was thrown out by Koenig.

Rhyne up—Ball one, inside. Strike one, called, curve. Ball two, outside. Rhyne flied to Meusel.

P. Waner up—P. Waner was given a big hand as he stepped to the plate. Paul Waner hit the first pitch for a fly to Meusel.

Ruth up—Strike one. Ball one. Ruth lifted a high one to Wright back on the grass. Babe was out under the rule whether the ball was caught or not.

Gehrig up—Gehring tripled to left center, scoring Combs and Koenig. But Gehrig was out at the plate trying for a home run, Barnhart to L. Waner to Wright to Gooch.

Meusel up—Strike one, called. Strike two, called. Ball one, outside. Strike three. Meusel missed a curve for the third strike.

Two runs, three hits.

SECOND INNING

PITTSBURGH — Wright flied to Coombs. Lazzeri threw out Traynor. Lazzeri threw out Barnhart.

NEW YORK—Lazzeri struck out. Wright threw out Dugan. Harris making a scoop of the low throw. Traynor threw out Grabowski.

THIRD INNING

PITTSBURGH — Harris flied to Combs. Gooch was called out on strikes. Lazzeri threw out Meadows.

NEW YORK—Rhyne threw out Pennock. Combs flied to L. Waner. Wright made a fine catch of Koenig's fly.

FOURTH INNING

PITTSBURGH—Lazzeri threw out L. Waner. Rhyne popped to Koenig. P. Waner lined to Dugan.

NEW YORK—Ruth fanned. Gehrig walked. Meusel was safe on Traynor's wild throw, Gehrig going to third and Meusel to second. Lazzeri fanned. Traynor threw out Dugan. One error.

FIFTH INNING

PITTSBURGH—Wright popped to Grabowski. Traynor fouled to Grabowski. Barnhart flied to Combs.

NEW YORK—Grabowski popped to Wright. Pennock fanned. Meadows threw out Combs.

SIXTH INNING

PITTSBURGH—Pennock threw out Harris. Gooch flied to Ruth. Meadows flied to Combs.

NEW YORK—Rhyne threw out Koenig. Rhyne threw out Ruth. Gehrig doubled to right center. Meusel fanned.

SEVENTH INNING

PITTSBURGH—Lazzeri threw out L. Waner. Dugan threw out Rhyne. P. Waner grounded out to Lazzeri.

NEW YORK—Lazzeri singled to center. Dugan sacrificed. Meadows threw too late to Wright. Both runners were safe. Duerst batted for Grabowski. Rhyne threw him out as the runners advanced. Pennock grounded to Rhyne, who threw to Gooch too late to get Lazzeri, Dugan going to third. Pennock on first. Combs singled to right, scoring Dugan and sending Pennock to third. Koenig doubled to right, scoring Pennock, Combs taking third. Cvengros pitching. Ruth hit a home run into the right field stands, scoring Combs and Koenig ahead of him. Gehrig fanned. Meusel fanned. Six runs. Four hits.

EIGHTH INNING

NEW YORK—Spencer catching. Rhyne threw out Lazzeri. Dugan singled to center. Rhyne threw out Bengough. Dugan took second. Traynor threw out Pennock. One hit.

NINTH INNING

PITTSBURGH—Groh batted for Cvengros. He popped to Pennock. L. Waner singled to left. Rhyne flied to Combs. L. Waner went to second unmolested. P. Waner flied to Lazzeri. One hit.

NEW YORK—Unplayed.

POOSH 'EM UP

Tony Lazzeri, star second baseman of the Yankees, whose work in the world series to date establishes him as one of the outstanding figures in the 1927 fall classic. Tony's ability to get on base has figured prominently in the Yankees' attack. His work in the field has left nothing to be desired.

HE COMES BACK

Mark Koenig, shortstop of the Yankees, who, against the Cardinals last year, made errors that led to the downfall of the American League champions in the world series. In the series with the Pirates, Koenig not only is playing flawless ball at the dicicult shortfield, but also is supplying the pepper that is keeping the Yankee infielders on their toes.

BUNTS

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Ma and Pa Waner, parents of Paul and Lloyd, were sitting behind the Pirate bench long before the game started.

Lloyd Waner, who reached base safely in launching the Pirate attack in each of the first two games, was stopped by Pennock today. He grounded out to Koenig.

After Ruth had lofted to Wright in the first inning, Gehrig made a strong bid for a homer with a long drive to left center. Low drove in two mates, but he was out at the plate as he attempted to complete the circuit.

Manager Bush and Coach Art Fletcher of the Yankees had a terrific verbal fight while Bush was coaching at third in the second inning. Bush and Fletcher approached each other in a commanding way, saying warm things as they shook their hands in each other's faces. The umpires finally stopped it.

NEITHER A PIRATE NOR A YANK REACHED BASE IN THE SECOND FRAME.

Arrangements had been made for Admiral Plunkett to throw out the first ball, but the admiral forgot his stuff and did not throw out the sphere until Pennock had opened the game with another ball.

Only nine Pirates faced Pennock in the first three innings.

Meadows showed his mettle in the fourth. With Yanks on third and second and only one out, he fanned Lazzeri, forced Dugan to ground out and prevented a score.

RUTH, WHO IS CHEERED WHEN HE HITS A HOMER AND WHEN HE STRIKES OUT, CHOSE THE LATTER METHOD OF WINNING APPLAUSE IN THE FOURTH INNING.

Pennock appeared well on his way to a perfect game as he walked to the mound in the seventh inning. No Pirate had reached base in the first seven innings.

Going into the seventh inning of the third game no catcher had yet made a hit in the series. Smith, Gooch, Collins, Bengough and Grabowski all have failed to produce.

THE BUCS MUST HAVE ESTABLISHED SOME KIND OF A SERIES RECORD IN THE SEVENTH WHEN THE STARTING PITCHER WAS KNOCKED OUT FOR THE THIRD TIME IN AS MANY GAMES.

Cvengros relieved Meadows and Ruth helped him to get off to a "rousing" start by hitting a three-run homer into the rightfield stands. Babe's was first home run in the series.

60,000 WITNESS THIRD SERIES BATTLE

By JAMES J. LONG.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Oct. 7.—The twice-beaten Pirates had their backs to the well-known wall today when the scene of the big world series struggle shifted from Forbes Field to the home grounds of the Yankees. They faced such a situation that another defeat would almost mean elimination and defeat in the series, while a rally and a victory in the third game would mean that the Buccaneers were back in the running, with at least a fighting chance to win out in the series.

And a fighting chance is all that the Corsairs have asked or needed at any time during the season. On several occasions they appeared to have been forced out of the National League pennant race, but every time they showed the old never-say-die stuff and fought their way to the front again

PIRATE BATS HELPLESS BEFORE PENNOCK

By HAVEY BOYLE.

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—With a weakened Pirate batting order, almost helpless against the southpaw shoots of Herb Pennock, Yankee hurler, the Pirates at the end of the seventh inning of the third world series game here this afternoon found themselves trailing. The score was 2 to 0.

MAGISTRATE BRANDS DREYFUSS LEGAL SCALPER

COURT FREES SERIES SEAT SPECULATORS

"If it is all right for Barney Dreyfuss to charge five times the regular price for baseball tickets, why shouldn't scalpers be allowed to double their money?"

That was Magistrate John W. Orie's declaration as he discharged two scalpers arraigned before him in Oakland Police Court this morning.

Magistrate Orie did not go into the matter of a city ordinance violation charge on which the men were arraigned, but handled the cases on an equity basis.

CONDEMNS SEAT SALE

He condemned the distribution methods used by the ball club as he ordered Hymen Labelle, 25, of 631 Chislett street and Clarence Beck, 31, of 2202 Perrysville avenue, the defendants, released and their tickets returned to them. Three others arrested in connection with scalping in the vicinity of Forbes Field will be discharged when they appear for hearings, he said.

SCALPERS ONLY HOPE

"If it had not been for scalpers, a lot of people would have been unable to get tickets," was his parting shot.

The Oakland Police Station was converted into a world series' box-office yesterday when general admission tickets, held by 20 scalpers, were sold by Police Inspector Albert Beebe to a long line of waiting customers.

The alleged scalpers were taken into custody during the day and were given the choice of having their tickets sold at face value and going free or of having the tickets confiscated and spending a night in jail. All chose the former and the sale began. The receipts were turned over to the scalpers.

Fickle Fan Bared by Series

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

There is something pathetic about a ball game.

We can hear the "Ah-h-h, listen to the sob sister," emanating from thousands and thousands of masculine throats. But, nevertheless, that is our story and we'll stick to it! Ball games are sad affairs.

Oh, yes, wonderful when the home team is going fine. But let them slump—then listen. For instance, that crowd out at Forbes Field yesterday. Mauling, yelling, crowding, cramming into every nook and corner, cheering the Pirates like maniacs when they went on the field.

But did they give them a smile and an ovation when they left that would say:

"We don't mind your not being perfect all the time, fellows. Better luck in New York."

THEY DID NOT

It was much the same crowd as the opening, except that it seemed bigger and noisier and a little less careful of women and children in the scramble to get to the seats. But it became a little more furious and a little less boosting and, finally, slumped into its seat and just looked bored.

Wild! Then boo-ing a bit. Then bored. That was the slate. And that is a big ball crowd when things are not all "to the gravy." To a woman it doesn't look like awfully good sportsmanship. Pretty punk loosers, you men.

WOULD NOT BET

Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, venerable old scion of baseball, looked the crowd over before the game and shook his head.

"I wonder how much money will be lost in this crowd today. Wouldn't you like to have all the cash that will be thrown away?"

Admitting it would come in well for pin money, we asked the colonel:

"Have you ever bet on your team?"

He laughed, a sort of cynical snort, and raised his eyebrows:

"Me? No, my dear girl, I know too little about baseball! I have never bet on any kind of a game. A prize fight, either. It is the suckers who throw their money away like that. I have better use for mine. I'd like to see the betting on ball games stopped. But, it can't be done."

When Vic Aldridge fanned the Babe there was a mighty roar like a hurricane coming on. Even the press box came to life—and that is unusual. The scribes usually sit looking about as animated as a bunch of chorus girls at a lecture on "Farm Life Among the Hindoos."

But there were a few "whassats," and "whossits," and one blond bespectacled individual did a nose dive into his typewriter and wrote like mad for the next five minutes. His inspiration had struck!

This scribe lost control when Li'l Lloyd hit the three-bagger and nearly got mobbed for jumping up and screeching. The consensus of opinion seemed to be:

"Hey! Why don't yuh set down!"

That's just like a ball crowd! No sympathy!

WANERS STEADY

This is off the map. But over in the Yankee den before the game a prominent player, a very prominent player, as a matter of fact, confided:

"Y'no, all that business about being afraid of the Waners we sprung the day we were working out here. That was only in fun. We really thought they'd break."

He grinned and an amused light came into his eyes.

"Yeah, we all thought Paul and Lloyd would get scared and bungle. But, honest, the way they keep their heads is just nobody's business. Those guys will never bust. Believe me, the Bucs can depend upon them."

A cruise around the side lines of the upper section was interesting. We counted 175 women fighting to see over the heads of the men—and trying to push their way to where they could see the game.

Not all of them were flappers, either. There were gray-haired women, too. A proud father and mother took turns holding up a small boy about 5 so he could learn a little about the great American game.

It was hot as blazes at Forbes Field. And except for the two fans Paul and Babe got there didn't seem to be a fan in sight, except baseball fans. The most exasperating thing about the whole game was the way that tray of pop gave out 14 times just before it got to the middle of the press section.

The pop venders should be able to spend the winter in Florida buying real estate. A small boy went around calling:

"Last two bottles! Last two bottles!"

And HOW those two bottles did hold out. He had another kid just out of sight handing him two more when the customers grabbed for what they believed to be the last of the liquid refreshments. That kid will be a big scalper some day!

SUN-TELE FIRST WITH BOX-SCORE, GAME DETAIL

COMPLETE

Fans pouring from Forbes Field last night a few minutes after the Yankees had for the second time humbled the Bucs, found newsboys selling Sun-Teles replete with box score and detail of the game. Not only the score by innings, a play-by-play account of each inning, and sidelights of the game were contained in this edition, but also stories by James J. Long, Havey Boyle, "Chilly" Doyle, Alma Sioux Scarberry, The International News Service, Associated Press and United Press. It was the most complete sports extra edition ever sent to the streets of Pittsburgh. The first 2,000 Sun-Teles to arrive at Forbes Field were gobbled up by fans before other incomplete stories of the game reached there.

NEW TRIUMPHS AHEAD

The Sun-Tele "World Series Extra" arrived at Forbes Field Thursday five minutes ahead of all competition. Wednesday it was there six minutes ahead. Today and tomorrow it will be on the downtown and other streets first. And Monday—if the Pirates force a return engagement here, as seems likely—Sun-Teles will be first at Forbes Field once more. Every angle of the game today and tomorrow will be covered as thoroughly as were those of the games played here—and ask any fan who read one of those if he wasn't given interesting and complete accounts. Fans watching the Sun-Tele electrical score board facing Bigelow boulevard will be able to buy a sporting extra almost as soon as they see the final out registered on the monster playing board.

TODAY

San Francisco, bring the intellectual delegates out here and give them a chance to see their own country, coming and going by different routes.

Delegates from New York would be especially interested, for they would see in San Francisco and Oakland a greater New York of the future. San Francisco and Oakland will produce on a bigger scale, some day, than Manhattan and Brooklyn.

ALREADY, within a 30-mile radius, San Francisco with Oakland and smaller population centers adjoining, has a population of 1,600,000, the greatest population center on the Pacific Coast.

Californians have a high opinion, each of his own city or town, and all of their glorious state. But not one of them imagines even faintly what his state is to be. They are too near the picture.

SAN FRANCISCO and Oakland, on either side of the bay, but united by bridges and tunnels, will have a population, far greater and richer than that of New York today.

Already through the Giannini brothers, California has built up a bank with close to a billion dollars.

A few years ago the father of the Giannini boys started his little bank in the Italian quarter, calling it "The Bank of Italy," for the convenience of Italian fruit growers. That bank shows how things grow out here.

ITALY has nearly 40,000,000 inhabitants. This state, much bigger than Italy, infinitely more fertile will have 40,000,000 inhabitants, and twice that number. Who can tell what the United States will be when its various states exceed in population, prosperity and power, great individual nations in Europe. That is coming.

INCLUDE a trip to the Pacific Coast in your vacation plans. Any one of a dozen railroads, or any one of a dozen automobiles, at any price that suits you, will bring you here. And once here, traveling from San Diego in the south to Seattle in the north, you will get your first real idea of this nation's greatness and future.

Don't go to heaven without seeing the Pacific Coast. If you do you won't be able to give the angels any accurate account of your own country.

ACTING POSTMASTER FOR WARREN NAMED

The first bad blood of the series cropped out in today's game when the gigantic Arthur Fletcher, Yankee coach, and Donie Bush, small Pirate manager, engaged in wordy debate. Their argument got so hot that after Fletcher had followed Bush to the Pirate dugout, Umpire Moran cautioned both men to cease their bickerings.

The Pirates, pursued by an increasing jinx, went into today's game without the services of George Grantham. Hal Rhyne played second base and batted second. Barnhart was shoved down to the sixth notch.

Lee Meadows made his series debut for the Pirates and got off to a bad start. Combs singled to center to start the game, Koenig following with an infield hit. Ruth obliged with an easy fly to Wright, but Gehrig, one of the big stars of the series, came through with a triple to left field. The ball was very high, but it went too deep into left field for Barnhart to get under it. Combs and Koenig scored on the smash, but Gehrig was out trying to stretch his triple into a homer, Lloyd Waner, Barnhart to Wright to Gooch.

While the Yankees thus got to Meadows early, the Pirates with four lefthand hitters in the lineup, were easy for Southpaw Pennock, who retired the Pirates in order inning after inning.

Bush, coaching at third, apparently was subjected to the sharp taunts of Fletcher, feeling hilarious because he was on the winning bench with his club two games ahead at that time and sailing apparently to another victory.

Bush cupped his mouth with his hand and retorted to Fletcher. As the teams changed sides in the second inning the little Pirate boss and the tall Fletcher got quite close together to exchange pleasantries. It was the first serious break in amicable relations between the Pirates and Yankees.

The fact that his club had lost its second sacker, and was impotent against Pennock, probably made Bush's gorge rise without any taunts from Fletcher, and when Arthur started in riding the Pirate manager, Bush was ready for meat knives and battle axes.

With the Pirate cause looking black, the hitters failing to connect and not one even reaching first base about the only solace for Pittsburgh sympathizers was the way Meadows fanned the great Bambino when Babe opened the Yankee fourth.

The Yankees were dancing and prancing around after every putout, while on the Pirate bench there was nothing but gloom. The Pirates were fighting as best they knew how, but, with the Yankees gaining an early lead and Pennock showing great early effectiveness, the Pirates had little chance to show their best pepper.

The ball that Gehrig smacked to left field to put the Yanks ahead might have been caught if Barnhart had owned a little more speed. However, Clyde was on his bicycle but got to the ball just as it struck the ground. Even the great and dependable Traynor shocked Pirate rooters with a woozy heave in the fourth on Meusel's bounder. The throw went into the stands and Gehrig who had walked moved to third and Meusel took second on the ground rule covering such a throw into the stands. Meadows, after a poor start, showed his mettle in this jam when, with men on third and second, and only one out, Lee fanned Lazzeri and forced Dugan to bounce out to Traynor, who this time made a good throw to retire the side.

60,000 WITNESS THIRD GAME

in the face of seemingly helpless odds.

The Pirates themselves appeared to have a world of confidence in their ability to turn the tables and put through the first victory to their credit by winning this afternoon.

Shortly before game time, however, a blow was dealt to the Pirates' chances when George Grantham, second baseman, suffered such a severe injury to his side in the practice session that he was unable to play in today's game.

RHYNE AT SECOND

Grantham was as regretful as the other Pirates when it developed that he would not be able to play today. He said that he did not believe the injury serious enough to keep him out for more than one day, and that he fully expected to be back in the lineup tomorrow.

Manager Bush decided to send Hal Rhyne to second base in Grantham's place. A shift in the Pittsburgh batting order also was necessitated, Rhyne being put in second place and Barnhart in sixth.

The series is breaking all records for favorable weather. For the third time in succession, ideal conditions prevailed today, and though the fans came into the park slowly, they soon started to make the turnstiles click at a lively rate, and shortly before game time it looked as if 60,000 would be present, though there were still many vacant patches in the big triple-deck stand.

Manager Bush bore out his announcement of last night that Lee Meadows would be his pitching selection, with Johnny Gooch behind the bat. Gooch will catch all the games in which Aldridge or Meadows pitches and Smith will support Kremer, Hill and Miljus.

Manager Huggins declined to make a definite selection between Wiley Moore and Herb Pennock until just before the game time, preferring to wait to see whether Pennock's injured leg would permit him to bear down.

Finally he selected Pennock, and as a result, the Pirates, already with two defeats charged against them, were up against the proposition of facing a pitcher who had never lost a world series game. Pennock beat the Giants twice in 1923 and the Cardinals twice in 1926, his four wins without a defeat placing him within one of the world series record, held by Jack Coombs of the old Athletics, who won five games without being beaten.

Meadows, on the other hand, has never won a world series game. He pitched in only one, the opener against Washington in 1925, and lost it.

SCALPERS ACTIVE

Pittsburgh did not have any corner on the scalping of world series tickets. There was plenty of it here today in hotels and on the streets. Some of the speculators were asking as much as $25 or more for a single seat at today's game, and in some instances they got it.

Meadows managed to dispose of Ruth in the first inning on a pop fly after Combs and Koenig had singled. He was not so successful with Gehrig and the Yankee first baseman smashed a triple to left center, scoring both runners, but being caught at the plate himself trying to stretch it into a home run. The Yankees were again off in the lead.

Pennock, who appeared to have the Pirates completely at his mercy, continued to keep his effectiveness to such an extent that at the end of the sixth inning 18 men had been retired in succession, and not a Pittsburgh player had reached first base.

Meadows also pitched splendid ball after the first inning, but his mates were giving him no support at the bat.

Lee had faced Ruth three times andke pt him from knocking the ball out of the infield, retiring him once on strikes.

The Pirates were prevented from making their first hit in the seventh inning when Dugan made a spectacular play on Rhyne's bunt, grabbing up the ball with one hand on a dead run, throwing the batter out at first base by a narrow margin. It was the best play of the series. The seventh inning ended with the Pirates still hitless without having a man on first base.

New York rooters were pulling hard for a no-hit game for Pennock.

No pitcher has ever succeeded in hurling a no-hit game in a world series. The record is one hit, established by Ed Reulbach, a former Cub pitcher, in a world series game against the White Sox on October 10, 1906.

Pictorial Story of Incidents at Forbes Field Yesterday

SUPREME COURT ENDS SESSION HERE

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania yesterday finished its argument list for the fall session at Pittsburgh after daily sittings for the last two weeks. No opinions, except the appeal in the Woodside ballot cases, were handed down by the court before adjournment. The court heard arguments in more than a hundred cases during its sittings.

Among the cases argued yesterday was an appeal from a judgment of the Allegheny county courts in favor of Mrs. Margaret A. Strobel against Lewis A. Park for $18,000 damages for the death of her husband, Earle J. Strobel, who was crushed in an elevator in the Park Building, Pittsburgh, April 6, 1925.

The damage suit was tried before the late Judge John A. Evans and a jury, and the plaintiff was awarded $18,000 damages.

Attorneys for the appellant argued that the defendant had not been guilty of negligence, claiming that Strobel was ill before entering the elevator and his illness was the cause of his subsequent collapse and death.

WIDOW AND BEACH INDICTED IN DOCTOR'S DEATH

2 ARRESTED IN JERSEY MURDER

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Oct. 7.—(AP.)—An indictment charging murder in the first degree for the killing of Dr. A. William Lilliendahl near Hammonton, September 15, was returned today against Mrs. Margaret E. Lilliendahl, the slain physician's widow, and Willis Beach, her reputed admirer.

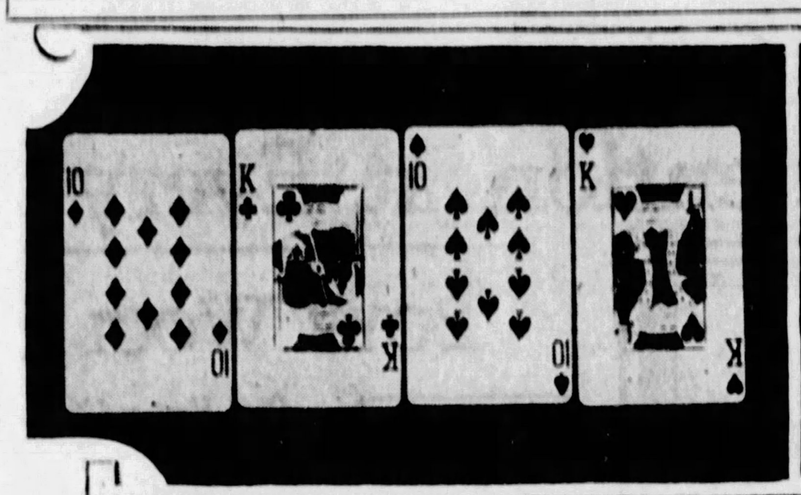
Mrs. Lilliendahl and Beach were served with warrants last night charging them with murder, after the Atlantic county grand jury had completed its investigation.

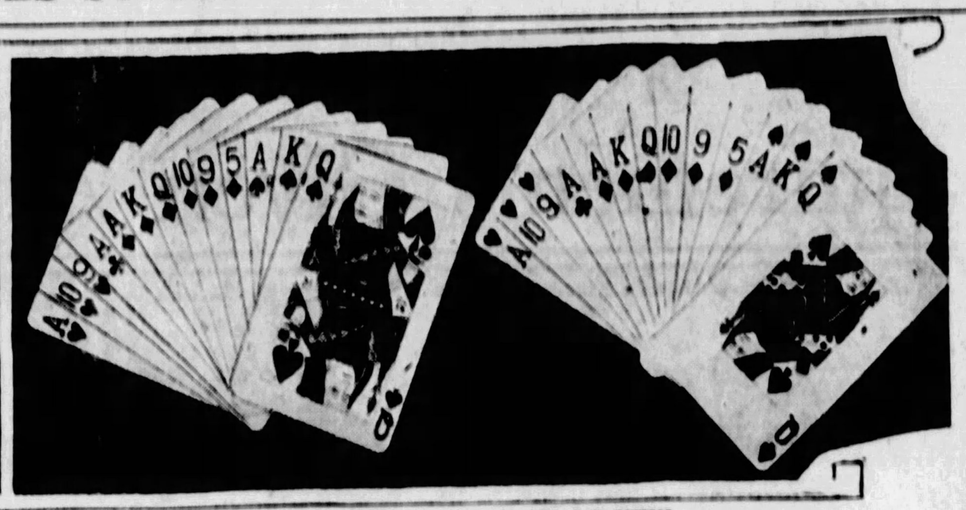
Both spent the night in the Atlantic county jail, adjoining the courthouse, where they were brought yesterday. Mrs. Lilliendahl as a material witness and Beach on a warrant charging him with aiding and abetting in the killing.

Dr. Lilliendahl was found dead in his automobile in a wooded section near Hammonton. He and his wife had been driving. Mrs. Lilliendahl told the police they had been attacked by two Negroes who jumped on their car and shot the doctor three times and robbed him.

State police and county authorities doubted Mrs. Lilliendahl's story and had her placed under $25,000 bail as a material witness.

NEW STYLE CARD -:- EASES STRAIN -:- ON PLAYERS' EYES





MINORS AND MAJORS

Major suits, hearts and spades, have symbols above the name of the card, while the minor suits, clubs and diamonds, have the symbols below. The pasteboard enthusiast will appreciate the advantages of this.

OLD STYLE HAND AND NEW

In any hand, particularly a bridge hand as above, the sameness of the cards of standard make often is to blame for blundering plays, as unintentional revokes, for instance. The new style corrects this by preventing strain and the resulting eye fatigue.

PRINCE WILLIAM TO SEE REAL AMERICAN SPORT

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—In order that he may see what purely American sport is like, Prince William of Sweden, has been invited to attend the Chicago-Purdue football game to be played at the Mid-way here on Saturday, October 15. The Prince is scheduled to deliver a lecture at the Auditorium Theater here on that evening. He will come here from Milwaukee, where he will lecture.

Sees Tariff, Not Dry Law Campaign Issue

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—"Overshadowing prohibition as an issue in the 1928 presidential campaign are economic differences between the two major political parties," declared Senator Smith (D.) of South Carolina, on his return to the Capital yesterday.

"Prohibition will not be made a party issue in the presidential campaign, because both parties are divided in their own ranks on that matter," said Smith, continuing.

"It is too early to form definite conclusions as to who the standard-bearers will be for the Republican and Democratic parties. The whole present set-up can be upset in a week.

"The issues that divide the Republican and Democratic parties are as evident today as they ever were in history. The same differences exist as prevailed between the Hamiltonian and Jeffersonian doctrines.

"A better example could not be cited than the tariff. Our dispute with France points to that as a major issue.

"The wet and dry issue has been given much more attention than it deserves. Let the Democrats talk about special privileges given by the Republican administration to the few, the tariff and centralization of government in Washington and states' right, and we will win."

THUGS BEAT AND ROB PHYSICIAN OF $7,000

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Oct. 7.—Overpowered, beaten unconscious and robbed of $7,000 Dr. Ollie Wikle, physician, was found by the roadside near Indian Creek after he had started to Madison, Ala., to buy cotton. Two masked men committed the attack and robbery, the victim reported.

Dr. Wikle was found by a passing motorist and taken to his home in Indian Creek.

PLOTS BOUGHT BY DUQUESNE UNIVERSITY

Duquesne University has purchased from Israel Parker 66x100 feet with a double brick apartment at 904-06 Vickroy street, a brick dwelling at 908 Vickroy street, and a row of five brick dwellings at 903-11 Ivanhoe street. The property faces holdings of the university on Vickroy street. The consideration was not disclosed.

The Granite Improvement Company has transferred to Franklin C. Irish the former M. Streng's Sons Company plant in River avenue, North Side. The lot is 217x220 feet and is bounded on one side by property of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

George E. McKee, a builder, has sold a new brick living room type residence at the corner of Amberson and Ellsworth avenues, Seventh Ward, for a consideration in the neighborhood of $40,000. The name of the buyer was not disclosed. The lot is 50x150 feet and includes a two-car garage.

A row of four stores at 4208-12 Penn avenue, Ninth Ward, has been sold by Mary E. Maley to Samuel Weseky at private terms. The lot is 79x100 feet.

James H. Thompson sold for the Walter Evans estate to H. Alexopoles a house at 362 Ophelia street for $6,000, and for Horace E. Gambrill to M. C. Culotta a dwelling at 508 South Lang avenue for $9,250.—

A house on the south side of Adelaide street near Iowa street, Fifth Ward, lot 28x100 feet, has been sold by Pearl Venger to Roy M. Kirk for $11,000.

In Squirrel Hill avenue, Fifteenth Ward, Hyman T. Little sold to Max Feldman a house on 40x122 feet for $10,000.

Building permit applications included:

Tenth Ward—F. W. Smith, brick building, rear 1803 Jancey street, $19,000.

Twenty-ninth Ward—E. M. Quail, brick dwelling, 129 Madeline street, $8,000.

DOCTOR-BANKER DIES IN OHIO

BELLAIRE, O., Oct. 7.—Dr. A. C. Beetham, 55, president of the Buckeye Savings and Loan Company, largest institution of its kind in Eastern Ohio, fell dead in his home here today. A heart attack is blamed. He was a brother of H. R. Beetham, of Cadiz, former speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives and candidate for governor several years ago.

MANY WOMEN HAVE TOXEMIA

And Don't Know It! When your system is poisoned, due to retention of waste matter in bowels—doctors call it "toxemia." Symptoms are nervousness, headaches, body pains, irritability, lack of ambition and languidness. Any one symptom is Nature's cry to drive out the poisonous wastes that cause Toxemia. Neglect is dangerous! Take Partola, an antiseptic, mint-flavored laxative tablets, at night. Eliminates poisonous wastes, stimulates digestion, leaves you bright-eyed, radiantly healthy. Any good druggist sells regular box 30c, double size 50c.

A Message to Underweight Men and Women

The one supremely good health-building tonic that is also the one great weight producer known to modern science the country over is McCoy's Tablets.

They build flesh where flesh is needed—sunken cheeks, neck and chest—and many a man and woman, skinny and scrawny, have thanked McCoy's after a few weeks' treatment for the decided improvement in looks and figure.

Many times the increase in weight is astonishing—one exceedingly thin woman gained 10 pounds in 23 days.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 sixty-cent boxes of McCoy's Tablets or 2 one-dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health—your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price.

The name McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets has been shortened—just ask for McCoy's Tablets at May's Drug Stores or any drug store in America.

POLICE BULLETS BALK THEFT

Two men, arrested early this morning when fear of bullets fired by Patrolmen J. D. Scanlon and Ernest Whitworth brought them to a halt, were fined $100 each in the North Side Police Station today on suspicious person charges. The patrolmen testified the two were attempting to steal an automobile of Earl L. Goodwin, parked in front of his home at 821 Union avenue. They fled when the officers appeared and were chased several blocks.

RETAILERS LAUD PITTSBURGH STORES

Delegates to the three-day conference of the Research Bureau for Retail Training today visited Pittsburgh's outstanding department stores and returned to Mellon Institute with high praise for the stores.

Two round-table discussions were held today on the Pitt campus. G. D. Halsey, personnel director for Woodward and Lothrop, Washington, D. C., directed the discussion on "Training Executives," which brought out praise for Pitt's Research Bureau from L. E. Beckstein of William Hengerer Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and J. G. Clark of Robert Simpson Company, Ltd., Toronto, Canada. And in the afternoon session "Personnel Budget" was argued in a discussion led by O. C. Lloyd, personnel director for Kaufmann's. A. H. Burchfield, vice president of Joseph Horne Co., was scheduled as toastmaster for the banquet in Hotel Schenley tonight, when some of the speakers will be Albert Koch, president of LaSalle and Koch, Toledo, O.; Chancellor John G. Bowman, Pitt, and James H. Green, director of the Research Bureau.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All Druggists.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c, 30c, 60c.

GENERAL MEETS FIRING SQUAD DEATH FEARLESSLY

How a Brave Soldier Dies Is Described

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Gen. Alfredo Rueda Quijano, executed for rebellion, died bravely.

Placed against a wall in the courtyard of San Lazaro Military Prison, stripped of his insignia and branded a traitor, he spurned the blindfold which would have shut out the sight of the fatal rifle muzzles and twice summoned his executioners nearer, that they might not miss.

Quijano led his troops out of the Mexico City garrison barracks last Sunday night to join the rebellion for the leadership of which Gen.

Pastor Dies

REV. W. D. IRONS

Dr. Irons, for 48 years pastor of the McDonald (Pa.) United Presbyterian Church, succumbed to pneumonia. He had only the one charge, having declined several college presidencies. He was the father of Assistant City Solicitor Harold M. Irons.

Francisco Serrano already has been executed, and for which Gens. Arnulfo Gomez and Hector Almada are being hunted in the interior of Vera Cruz.

Seized and turned over to government forces by his own men, who claimed he had deceived them, Quijano early yesterday was found guilty and condemned to die.

At 11 o'clock he was taken across the city from the Santiago prison, where the court-martial sat, to the place of execution. He arrived there at 11:20. Five minutes later he lay lifeless on the ground, but in the interim he had borne himself with such a degree of composure and fortitude that even the soldiers who killed him murmured: "Que Hombre!" ("what a man!")

DR. W. D. IRONS EXPIRES

The Rev. Dr. William Dickson Irons, 75, for 48 years pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, McDonald, died of pneumonia Wednesday at his home there. A son is Assistant City Solicitor Harold M. Irons.

Born near New Sheffield, Beaver county, July 16, 1852, a son of Joseph and Margaret (Douds) Irons, he became a school teacher when 14 and by teaching in winter and working on the farm in summer earned his way through Westminster College, and was graduated in 1874. He spent some time teaching after graduation and entered Allegheny Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1880, receiving a call to the McDonald church before he had finished his course. He was installed pastor in June, 1880. He declined the presidency of Tarkio College of Muskingum and a professorship in Xenia Theological Seminary. He established Ingleside Academy, McDonald, which he conducted 15 years, and started the French United Presbyterian Mission in McDonald. He served as trustee of Westminster College 40 years and on the United Presbyterian Board of Publication. He also was a trustee of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary and the Boys' Industrial Home and assisted in the preparation of Sabbath School literature.

Married June 17, 1874, to Miss Edith Belle Van Orsdell of New Wilmington, who died in 1925, he leaves these sons and daughters, Harold M. Irons, Mrs. Mabel Moore, Buffalo; Mrs. W. H. Cramer, Newark, O.; William V. Irons, Buffalo and Joseph R. Irons, Noblestown; two brothers, a sister, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Elections' Association Takes Up Probe

The Allegheny County Elections Association, which up to the present has been a minority factor in the primary election investigation, today assumed full charge of the probe here with an announcement that, despite the 100-odd arrests in connection with alleged irregularities, the campaign "has hardly begun."

The Allegheny county association will take up the investigation where the Pennsylvanias Elections' Association, with which it has been working, left off, and will continue action even after the returning board finishes its work, expected to be completed by Monday.

Extremely "vicious" conditions have been revealed so far, Thomas J. Walker, secretary of the Pennsylvania association, said today, pointing especially to the Fourteenth District, Twenty-first Ward, where, he charged, that out of 308 Republican ballots cast, only 41 escaped alteration. Six of the eight Democratic ballots cast in the ward failed to find their way into the ballot box at all, he said. The Twenty-first Ward, on the North Side, is the home of Police Inspector Charles Faulkner. William A. Herd is Republican chairman.

Dangerous Varicose Veins Reduced or Money Back

This Simple Home Treatment Is Giving Amazing Results

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart, as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins or bunches, the best advice that anyone in this world can give you is to ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply as directed night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that even Piles are quickly relieved. McCullochs 10 Convenient Drug Stores sell lots of it.

NOT GUILTY, REMUS PLEA

'Bootleg King' Waives Wife Murder Hearing

By International News Service.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 7.—George Remus, former "bootleg king" stepped to the bar of police court this morning, and in a firm voice entered a plea of "not guilty" when he was called for preliminary hearing in Municipal Court this morning on charges of murdering his estranged wife, Imogene.

The proceedings were very brief.

Remus' case was the first one called on the docket.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked Judge William D. Alexander.

Remus, cool and reserved, without a show of emotion, answered:

"Not guilty, your honor."

"Are you ready for trial?" he was asked.

"I wave examination, your honor," he answered.

A crowd of 300 persons filled the courtroom and corridors, but Remus' daughter, Romola, did not accompany him to the courtroom.

Despite his declaration that he is "perfectly sane" and that he would not plead insanity, the defense of Remus will be an insanity plea, according to his friends here today.

Mrs. Remus was shot as Remus snatched her from a taxicab in Eden Park here yesterday morning, as she was en route to the courthouse to press her divorce suit against the former bootlegger, who is rated a billionaire.

Anticipating the insanity plea, County Prosecutor C. P. Taft last night had Remus examined by Dr. W. C. Kendig, Hamilton county alienist. The findings of the alienist have not been made public.

Numerous friends of Remus gathered at the Big Four station here last night and met his daughter by a former marriage, Miss Romola Remus, 22, who came from Chicago, the former home of the Remus family, to be with her father.

"I've come to help Daddy, because he needs me now," she declared.

Although Remus insists that he is "perfectly sane" and that he will reject all offers of counsel and defend himself, his friends predicted that competent counsel would be retained for him, and that temporary insanity would be offered as his chief defense.

OFFER SERVICES

Telegrams from W. W. (Ropes) O'Brien, famous Chicago criminal lawyer, and from Hugh J. Daly, former United States District Attorney in Chicago, were said to have been received last night by Remus, proffering their services in his defense, but he told reporters he would not accept these offers.

Fashionably attired, and displaying but little emotion, Miss Remus was taken immediately to her father's cell on her arrival.

"I am here to cheer daddy up," she said. "When I received word that he was in trouble, I came by the first train. I can't say anything about the affair leading up to it, and I don't know anything about daddy's mental condition. All I know is he needs me."

When Remus' cell door was opened he rushed out into the visitors' corridor, and threw his arms around his daughter, crying: "Romola, my baby!"

The two remained locked in a tight embrace for several minutes. Remus then sought to reassure his daughter, as she whispered encouragement to him, and told him she would "stay with him to the end." Miss Remus later went to the home of friends of Remus here to spend the night.

"The loyalty of my baby overwhelms me," Remus said, after the girl had left the jail. "I feel more like facing a jury now. I did my duty by ridding society of a parasite. I am not afraid of the verdict of any 12 honest men. The unwritten law will prevail."

Franklin L. Dodge, former agent of the Department of Justice, named as the friend of Mrs. Imogene Remus, slain by her husband in Cincinnati, is well known in Pittsburgh. It was Dodge that carried on the preliminary investigation that led to the grand jury indictment and subsequent conviction of a number of defendants in the whisky conspiracy trial in the Federal District Court of the A. Guckenheimer & Brother Company, in June, 1924.

FINE TWO $100 FOR OPERATING STILLS

Walter Kauneski, 702 Campania avenue, and William Tocklase, 6412 Ivary street, were fined $100 each or 60 days in the workhouse by Magistrate William Soost in Frankstown Avenue Police Station this morning, following raids by East End police early today. At each place a still was found operating in the basement. Mash, moonshine and sugar were confiscated.

PATTERSON PAID OUT $1,485

Attorney Frank P. Patterson, Republican nominee to the Common Pleas Court bench, spent $1,485.10 on his campaign, according to his expense account filed yesterday. He received contributions amounting to $[illegible].

Frank F. Canuti, candidate for judge, reported an expenditure of $2,212.21, including $940 paid to watchers, and funds given by 32 contributors.

Sol S. Goldstein, aldermanic candidate in the Fourteenth Ward, reported receipts of $2,225. His expenditures totaled $2,383.50, including traveling expenses and fees paid for watchers' certificates.

MILLER DENIES SURRENDER

Burt W. Miller, president of the Window Glass Cutters and Flatteners' Protective Association, today issued this statement:

"Early reports of the settlement of our strike against the American Window Glass Company, which began October 1 and ended yesterday, may have given an erroneous impression. With the approval of a majority of the 450 employes on strike, our wage committee agreed to return at the former rate of pay with the provision that if the price of glass should rise within the year the wages are to be increased. It should be distinctly understood that the men did not 'curl up.'"

HIKING CLUB SCHEDULES TWO JAUNTS FOR SUNDAY

Two hikes have been scheduled by the Pittsburgh Hiking Club for Sunday. A 13-mile, all-day hike, will start at Woodlawn and proceed along Raccoon creek to Beaver. Those who wish to take this walk will leave from the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie station at 9:15 a. m. Hikers desiring a short afternoon walk will hike from Horseshoe curve, Westview, to Allison Park, about six miles.

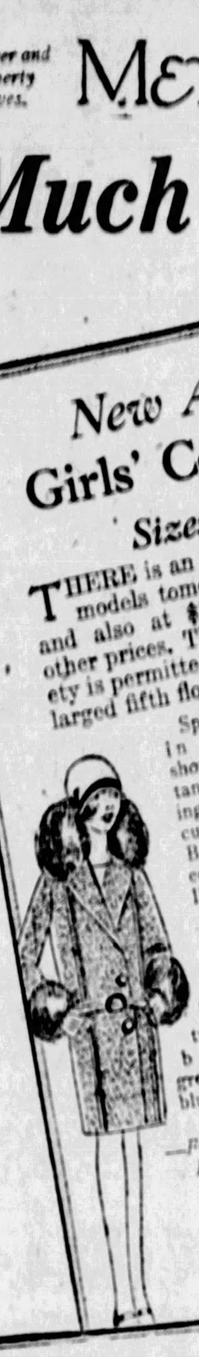
THERE is an unusual collection of models tomorrow in this group and also at $19.75, $25.00 and other prices. The extensive variety is permitted by our new, enlarged fifth floor department.



Sports models of tweeds in subdued patterns showing rich brown, tan and green blendings with collars and cuffs of French Beaver (as pictured) and Australian Opossum.

Dressy, fur trimmed types of Doveblo m in rich autumnal reds, browns, greens and blues.

—Fifth Floor—

Lavishly Furred Cloth Coats at $89.75 $95 and $129.50

FUR and more fur seems to be the slogan of the coat designers. These models are certainly in accord with the sentiment. Luxurious Paquin, shawl and mushroom collars are formed of Fitch-dyed Skunk, Fox, Squirrel, Beaver, Mole, Lynx and other pelt ries. The materials are Rayosa, Doveb loom, Velveteen, Broadtail and other fabrics of the smooth-surfaced family. Women's and Misses' sizes.

Newton, Shagbark, Grotto Blue, Pineneedle and Volga Green, Wine, Navy and Black. Model pictured is Rayosa with platinum wolf fur trimming. Price $129.50.

—Third Floor—

For Tomorrow New Junior Misses' Frocks, $16.00

For Girls and Small Women Who Wear Sizes 13 to 17

EVERY daytime dress requirement is covered by this comprehensive assemblage of models which displays the tailored mode in Silk Crepes and Satins, and informal afternoon models of Crepe Roma and Velveteen.

The color range encompasses smart Tan tones, Cocoa, Sapphire and Liberty Blue, Pineneedle and Balsam Greens, Oporto Red, Navy and Black.

The model pictured is of Black Velveteen with red collar and a red leather belt. Price $16.00.

—Fifth Floor—

Remarkable Achievements in Frocks at $16.50

SATIN and Velveteen are prominent in this Saturday presentation of unusual modes at a moderate price. Georgette, Silk Crepes, Jerseys and Lightweight Woolens are also much in prominence.

A feature of the showing is the variety, which offers types for every daytime occasion. The color range displays every popular shade on the color chart—new tans, browns, greens, wines and also navy and black. Sizes 14 to 44.

Novel, New Sports Frocks $9.75

INTERESTING affairs of jersey and velveteen such as pictured here—new tailored models of a very lightweight wool crepe—models entirely of jersey—all practical modes on the tailored order. You'll like the variety there is to choose from and you'll like their simple, tailored lines.

Leading Player in "The Miracle" On Spoken Stage Will Be Hero In Marion Davies' New Picture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.

THE morning when Marion Davies hears the old familiar words of "camera, lights, action," she will find Orville Caldwell on the set waiting for the same instructions. He has been chosen as Marion's leading man in "The Patsy," her next picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to be directed by King Vidor. Just a word about Mr. Caldwell. If you saw "The Miracle"—and most people in Los Angeles, Boston, San Francisco, and, of course, New York, patronized Morris Gest's famous production, you saw Mr. Caldwell as the knight.

He created that role. Now he is in the movies, chosen by Irving Thalberg to play opposite Marion in Barry Connor's popular play. Agnes Christine Johnstone, who has written the scenario, is familiar with the type of story that Marion does so well—a touch of comedy with a relieving pathos. "Beverly of Graustark," one of M. G. M.'s best sellers, adapted by Miss Johnstone, has all the elements that contribute to the box office value of a light romantic comedy, and it is, I think, the best of Marion's last year comedies.

William Russell just cannot seem to stay away from the Fox company. He may go to Warners, Paramount or M. G. M., but sooner or later he returns to his first love. He replaces Victor McLaglen in "Woman Wise," while Capt. Flagg, or Victor—take your choice—begins work on "A Girl in Every Port," with Howard Hawks directing. This is how it happened. The two pictures have the same releasing date and you know it would never do to give the dear public two films with the same star on the same day. Merciful heavens, no. So it's a lucky break for Bill and a lucky break for Victor. He won't have to make two pictures at once.

You can never tell about these little writers. Two months ago Ralph Spence, in a highly dramatic manner, announced that he had finished with the movies and was returning to New York. At the time, although I published his statement, I did so with a grain of salt, for when a man makes money writing snappy titles he usually sticks to the thing he does well. Anyway, Ralph is titling "Hanging Up Father," and has concontracted to do the same for two other M. G. M. pictures. After that—oh, well, let's wait and see.

How Hollywood does love to scent a romance! Ronald Colman purchased Norma Shearer's house in Glendale, and within a day after the purchase was made Ronald was engaged to three different girls. The fact remains he is not divorced from his wife as yet, and up to now no one has ever seen him with the same girl twice. He could truthfully say that he is wedded to his art, for nothing beyond his work seems to interest him much. At the moment he and Vilma Banky are busily engaged making "Leather Face" for Samuel Goldwyn.

Just a paragraph about Norma Shearer. I had a pleasant telegram from Mr. and Mrs. Thalberg (Norma Shearer) from Santa Barbara. I don't suppose the honeymooners are there now. They stopped in Santa Barbara en route for the North, where three weeks' honeymoon will be spent.

I think I have a better understanding of the western pictures now. James Swinnerton, famous creator of "Canyon Kids," "Mr. Jack" and "Little Jimmie," and other drawings, gave me a riding lesson and related some of the experiences these film companies have when they take their companies into the western countries. He told about one well-known actor who boasted of his familiarity with the West. After he was ready to ride his broncho in front of the camera it was discovered that he had put on his chaps backwards. "He thought that was the way they belonged," explained Jimmie, who knows his West as well as Remington or Zane Grey.

I haven't done as much studio visiting since I returned from New York as I should do. Hope no one will tell my boss. But on a fleeting visit to Universal City I caught a glimpse of Millard Webb at work on "Honeymoon Flats." It is a story from the pen of Earl Derr Biggers and is a Universal release.

STRAIGHT DRAMA ON STAGE

The Nixon, beginning Monday evening, will present a new society comedy, "The Zoo," by Winchell Smith and Michael Arlen. In the cast will be Roland Young, Wallace Eddinger, Irene Browne, Lucile Watson, Elsie Lawson and others.

"Interference" begins a week's engagement in the Alvin Monday evening. The principals are Arthur Wontner, A. E. Matthews, Phoebe Foster and Kathlene MacDowell. Later the play will open in New York.

The George Sharp Production Stock Company has only three more performances in the Pitt this season, the engagement closing tomorrow night. A large number of requests have been received at the box office, asking for notification of the return date next spring.

Carl Freed and his orchestra come to the Davis next week. Also Gladys Taylor, "Skip" Whitely and Jeanne Houston in "Vive la Danse."

The stage features in the Penn next week will be presented under the general title of "Jazz Week," and they will include Nina Olivettes eccentric dancer, and the eight Tiller dancing girls.

Laura La Plante is star of "Silk Stockings" which will open in Loew's Aldine for one week, beginning Monday. The supporting cast includes John Harron, Otis Harlan, William Austin, Tempe Pigot, Marcella Daily, Ruth Cherrington, Heinie Conklin and Burr McIntosh.

'IRONSIDES' CAMERAMAN ON BOW PRODUCTION

Alfred Gilks, who photographed the Paramount pictures, "Old Ironsides," "Figures Don't Lie" and "The Ten Modern Commandments," is the chief cameraman for the latest Clara Bow starring vehicle, "You Will Marry Me."

She's So Fair That It's Unfair

MARION DAVIES is the fair-haired lass in "The Fair Co-Ed," her new starring picture, in which she is a basketball heroine, for one thing.

STUART HOLMES CAST IN "MAN WHO LAUGHS"

Stuart Holmes, who will play Lord Dirry-Moir, and Sam De Grasse have been added to the cast of "The Man Who Laughs," which Paul Leni has started at Universal City after five months of preparation.

CAST IS COMPLETED FOR HERSHOLT FILM

Julia Swayne Gordon—and Helen Foster complete the cast of "13 Washington Square," by Leroy Scott, starring Jean Hersholt. Alice Joyce, George Lewis and Zasu Pitts are the others in this film.

MARGARET SEDDON AS LORELEI LEE'S MOTHER

Margaret Seddon has been assigned to the role of Lorelei Lee's mother in the Paramount film version of Anita Loos' "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," now being filmed in Hollywood under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair.

NEW BOND ISSUE ELECTION LOOMS

A special county bond issue election to pass on many bridge projects probably will be held in January. This was indicated yesterday by county officials who attended a meeting in the Old City Hall of representatives of the Ohio River Boulevard Association, Oakmont Boulevard Association, Saw Mill Valley Association, Ferry Street Bridge and Tunnel Association, South Hills and North Boroughs Association and the West End Bridge Association. Each organization is sponsoring an improvement project. The county representatives at the meeting were Commissioner E. V. Babcock, Director Norman P. Brown of the County Public Works Department, and W. Heber Dithrich, county solicitor.

The North Side Chamber of Commerce last night went on record as favoring a West End-Manchester bridge in preference to the proposed Ferry street bridge.

BROWNSVILLE LEGION POST ELECTS OFFICERS

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 7.—Robert Eaton was elected commander of A. Kramer Axton Post No. 295, American Legion. Others elected were: John T. Keffer, first vice commander; Enoch Easler, second vice commander; George Winners, chaplain; Albert Gue, color bearer; Arthur Gillett, adjutant; Emil Garwood, sergeant-at-arms; Henry Morrow, finance officer, and Dr. Alexander Spear, Jacob Shervard, Wilbur Wilson and Homer Ross, new members of the executive committee.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Just "making the motions"

a victim of cachexia (run down condition)

How often you have gone about your work feeling all in, "just making the motions"—a victim of cachexia (run down condition).

Whether this deadening feeling is due to chronic indigestion, constipation, deficiency of vital food factors or blood disorders (as evidenced by boils and pimples) it almost invariably responds at once to the use of pure yeast. For yeast is the great conditioner and regulator.

Eat yeast and eat it in a form you'll like—Yeast Foam Tablets. These little pellets are pure; they keep; they come in handy 5c packets or in the large 10-day treatment for 50 cents. Most folks chew them, though they're just as good if swallowed whole.

FIGHTS TO BE CO-ED

BARRED BY SYRACUSE

Miss Beatrice Anthony, 21, of Binghamton, is the cause of a controversy at Syracuse University. Officials of the university are determined to keep the doors of the institution closed to Miss Anthony although declining to state their reasons. Recently Justice Edward N. Smith handed down a decision whereby the university would be compelled to admit her as a student. It was announced that an effort would be made to reverse this decision.

Johnny Can't See Babe This Year Either

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—It seems that just about everything is against Johnny Sylvester, 12, son of Ira C. Sylvester, a vice president of the National City Company, who wants, more than anything, to see Babe Ruth in action.

Last year, when illness made it impossible for him to go to the Yankee Stadium to see the Babe during the world's series, the Bambino told him he would knock him a home run, and he did, three of them, all for Johnny and all in one game. And he sent the youngster an autographed baseball.

This year, Johnny, who lives in Essex Falls, N. J., has been hoping that he would see his hero, but the doctors said no.

And Johnny, too old to cry, or anything like that, turned away, nevertheless, and blinked hard at the ceiling.

2 WOMEN HELD UP IN BRUSHTON STORE ROBBERY

Waving Guns, Thugs Warn "No Foolin'"

Two women, one temporarily in charge of the J. & A. Electric Shop, 7221 Tioga street, retreated before a revolver in the hands of one of a pair of robbers who entered the store last night, rifled a cash register of $100, and escaped.

"Get into that back room and stay 20 minutes and no foolin'," one robber commanded Mrs. Nancy Zangrerilla, 28, a tenant above the store who was at the counter in the absence of her brother, Joseph Thomas, proprietor. Mrs. Zangrerilli, along with Mrs. Laura Defiana, 26, 7224 Tioga street, with whom she was chatting, ran into the adjoining room. They came out after they heard the robbers leave and notified police. "Two white men, well dressed," was the only description they could give of the holdup men.

DOGS BITE TWO CHILDREN

Fourteen stitches were required to close lacerations of the hands and face suffered by Elaine Orr, 4, of 1909 Federal street extension, when she was attacked by a dog in the yard of her home yesterday. The dog is owned by T. Shepherd, of 1927 Federal street. The girl was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

George F. Anglin, 8, of 1122 Allegheny avenue, was bitten by a dog in West North avenue last night, and a police dog attacked Martha Gantner, 12, of 541 Norman street, near her home.

FILM ACTRESS HIT BY AUTO

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Dagmar Godowsky, motion picture actress, and a friend, Dorothy Stanley, were knocked down and injured by an automobile last Saturday, it has been learned.

The accident became known through a police investigation at the request of a friend of Miss Stanley. Miss Godowsky is the daughter of Leopold Godowsky, the pianist.

Miss Godowsky has been unable to leave her apartment since the accident. Her physician said her injuries were internal, but not serious.

LEGION GETS LIBRARY FOR NEW KENSINGTON

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Oct. 7.—A community library to serve Arnold, Parnassus and New Kensington was effected by members of the local American Legion post last night, when 12 trustees were elected. The new library will be located in Stanton avenue.

Ray Reismyer, 16, of Spring Hill, who was second in the flying tourney, is with him.

Both lads, with their planes under their arms and under the care of a Sun-Telegraph representative, will compete in the national model tournament in the Southern city. They will enter their model airplanes in the gliding, distance and duration tests, and hope to bring the United States championship to Pittsburgh.

The lads are being sent by the Sun-Telegraph, which was associated in the Western Pennsylvania contests with the Bureau of Recreation. W. C. Batchelor, director of the bureau, will be one of the officials at the meet.

The boys will return Monday night.

NEW BALKAN WAR THREAT LOOMS

BREAK FEARED OVER MURDER OF GENERAL

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—The Jugoslav minister to Sofia has been authorized to inform the Bulgarian government that unless effective measures are taken to disband Bulgarian groups operating in Macedonia, the Jugoslav government has no other course but to recall him and to break off diplomatic relations.

The protest over the activities of the Bulgarian Comitadjis, or irregulars, came as a result of the assassination yesterday of Brig. Gen. Michael Kovachevitch, one of the best-known officers in the Jugoslav army at Istip, the crime being attributed to Comitadjis.

The Serbian-Bulgarian-Macedonian frontier has been closed by Jugoslav government troops and gendarmes, who are halting all traffic excepting transit in Macedonia, under the martial law measures taken as a result of the assassination.

Advices received in Belgrade this afternoon said that a band of Bulgarian Comitadjis attacked the Macedonian frontier village of Klisura early this morning, throwing nine bombs in government buildings and later fighting the gendarmes with rifles and hand grenades.

The attacking party, the advices stated, finally was repelled after a pitched battle lasting from 1 o'clock this morning until daybreak. The casualties were not given in the message.

RAILWAYS TRUCK HITS AUTO

Answering a call to Lyric street and Lincoln avenue, where an unidentified woman, aged about 65, was killed by a street car late yesterday, the emergency truck of the Pittsburgh Railways Company collided with an automobile at Frankstown and Hamilton avenues, injuring four persons.

The injured are J. D. Miller, 32, of New Texas; his wife, Mildred, 31, and two children, Earl, 5, and Jane, 3. They were taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital, where it was said none was seriously hurt. Another child, Dorothy, escaped unhurt.

STRANGE KIDNAPING

VICTIM BEATEN

Betty Jane Wagner, daughter of Mrs. Agnes Wagner, was found in a downtown New York office building after being snatched from the arms of her mother by a woman who later beat the child into unconsciousness with a ruler.

NEGRO BAPTISTS OPEN CONVENTION HERE

The thirty-sixth annual session of the Pennsylvania Baptist state convention (Negro) being held in the Monumental Baptist Church, Wylie avenue, and attended by 600 delegates representing 120 congregations, will conclude Sunday with morning and evening services in the Central Baptist Church and the Monumental Baptist Church. There will be meeting tomorrow of the executive board. The officers of the state organization are the Rev. J. H. Dwells, president; the Rev. T. J. Goodall, recording secretary; the Rev. C. C. Scott, corresponding secretary, and the Rev. W. Augustus Jones, chairman of the executive board.

DOCTORS FAVOR BOND ISSUE

Unanimous indorsement of the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue for a 10-year building program for state-owned institutions for feeble-minded and delinquent persons, marked the closing session of the seventy-seventh annual meeting of the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania in the Hotel Schenley. Dr. Charles E. Frazier, president of the Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania, speaking before the society, said the overcrowding of mental hospitals is acute, and cited an American Legion report that 700 ex-service men in Pennsylvania who are mentally ill are compelled to receive care outside of the state because there is no room for them in local institutions.

Next year's convention of the medical society will be held in Allentown.

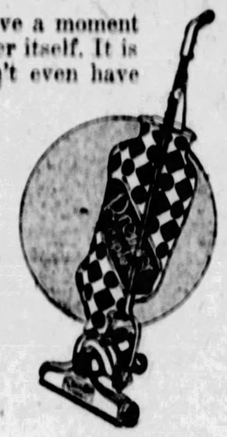
If the face powder you now use does not stay on long enough to suit you—does not keep that ugly shine away indefinitely—does not make your skin colorful like a peach—try this new wonderful special French Process Face Powder called MELLO-GLO. Remember the name MELLO-GLO. There's nothing like it.

CUT CLEANING HOURS!

YOU can spend less time cleaning and clean more thoroughly with a Premier Duplex. It works with double action. The motor-driven brush sweeps up dirt at the same moment that brisk suction is drawing it into the bag. Together they get it ALL.

And you need never give a moment to the care of the cleaner itself. It is ball bearing. You don't even have to oil. The Premier Duplex will clean for you for a lifetime. And it will cut down your cleaning hours and lengthen your leisure ones!



Premier Duplex

See a demonstration. If you prefer, phone for one right in your own home on your own rugs. See how thorough it is . . . how lightly it glides.

The Life and Letters of WOODROW WILSON

Engaged to Marry and Busy With Studies

Wilson as a Lover and Student Felt the Helpful Influence Of Ellen Axson at Hopkins

How Ellen Axson, his first wife, came into Wilson's life was told in yesterday's installment of the absorbing "Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in The Sun-Telegraph. The young man "with silky mustache and whiskers" pressed his court "furiously" and successfully. Wilson's own description of their first meeting was a revealing document.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

Wilson the Lover

THE friendship of Ellen Axson and Woodrow Wilson ripened swiftly. In September, 1883, on his way north to Baltimore, the young lawyer stopped at Asheville, N. C., and, walking up the street, saw by chance a girl sitting on the upper porch of the hotel. She was wearing a hat with a peculiar braid upon it which he knew at once. He sprang up the stairs to meet her. She had been summoned home by the serious illness of her father and was stopping to wait between trains. The youth carried everything before him. They walked up and down the porch, he quoted to her Bagehot's remark that a bachelor is "an amateur in life," and before they parted they were engaged.

It was in many ways the most important experience of Woodrow Wilson's life. It was not until he met Ellen Axson, as he himself said, that he became "fully himself." It discovered to him at length how he was to use his "unguided strength." It was a love "true and fit for foul weather."

"A man who lives only for himself has not begun to live—has yet to learn his use and his real pleasure, too, in the world. It was not necessary he should marry to find himself out, but it is necessary he should love."

It was an attachment such as the youth himself had never dreamed of, such a "new realization" as he could not have imagined. His conception of women had been founded partly, no doubt, upon Scott's and Cooper's novels and partly built upon the chivalrous Southern ideal. He had sought to "cherish that chivalrous, almost worshipful, regard for woman which seems to me the truest badge of nobility in man." He sits willingly now at her feet. A letter written a little more than a month after their engagement lets us deep into the heart of the man.

His "New Realization"

"I am proud and willful beyond all measure . . . and I used to think, like other young men I suppose, that I should never pay any but entirely voluntary homage to any woman. With an absurd pride of intellect, like Lydgate's, I thought it might be possible to get along with a wife as a leisure-moment companion, dispensing with intellectual sympathy. Not that I did not want such sympathy—I knew that there would be a dreary side to life without it—nor because I thought women as a rule incapable of giving it; but principally, I believe, because I thought it would be unreasonable to expect my wife to go with me, even in spirit, into all the so-esteemed dry paths into which my studies were naturally leading me. See, therefore, how valuable to me . . . was that conversation about the characters in 'Middlemarch,' as we were returning once from 'a certain walk up a hill.' I had not read 'Middlemarch' then, but I had the delight of hearing you expound the significance of its plot; and from that exposition I made a discovery that thrilled me: that you knew what sort of a wife I needed—though you were not applying the moral to my case, and did not know how directly the story came home to my experience.

"I don't mean to compare myself with Lydgate. I have not yet proved myself possessed of any extraordinary talents, and I cannot claim the possession until I have put away certain discursive habits and brought all the powers I have into the line of some concentrated effort. But there is a very distinct parallel between Lydgate's aspirations and my own, and between the conditions—the conditions of home life—necessary to my ultimate success and those which might have insured his. No man who has a heart cast for the domestic relation, no man who isn't merely a student, simply a thinking machine, could wish to marry a woman such as John Stuart Mill married and doted on, who expels sentiment from life, knows as much as her husband of the matters of his special study, and furnishes him with opinions, ministering not to his love but to his logical faculty. . . . But, on the other hand, a man with any of the keen sensibilities of the student must be miserable if he have a study into which his wife cannot come as his close companion."

Her Important Influence

From the very first, Ellen Axson entered into every thought, every plan of Woodrow Wilson. She influenced his life at many of its critical moments. To an extraordinary extent she protected him, guided him, established the environment in which his intense nature could best function. "I am the only one who can rest him," she told a friend. She lacked somewhat of gayety and humor; she was, perhaps, overearnest; but she understood him from the first. She held him back when he was willing impetuously to cut off his work at Johns Hopkins University in order to marry her. She mitigated the intensity of his likes and dislikes; she was the wise counselor at every turn of his life. "My salvation," he once told her, "is in being loved" . . . He was a man of intense reserve, never vouchsafing more than a glimpse of the thoughts and impulses and affections "which are part and parcel of myself, and so sacred, not because they are great and rare but because they are private, personal, not current upon the vulgar tongue of the world." But to her he could open his whole soul:

". . . you are the only person in the world—except the dear ones at home—with whom I do not have to act part, to whom I do not have to deal out confidences cautiously; and you are the only person in the world—without any exception—to whom I can tell all that my heart contains."

He was essentially a lonely man; and his dependence upon his wife grew with the years. He was never away from home more than a day without writing to her, writing often at great length, and not mere letters full of dusty cares, but love letters. Beginning in 1883, this correspondence continued for 30 years—hundreds upon hundreds of letters—and to the end they were love letters. There seemed never to have been a failure upon the part of either to take the other, with absolute truthfulness, into full confidence.

Two years were to pass before their marriage, in 1885—two years of intense study for Woodrow Wilson, two years at her art in New York for Ellen Axson—but with a steadily deepening reliance upon each other.

Hard Study at Hopkins

It was as though a great load had been lifted from his spirit when Wilson decided finally, in the spring of 1883, to give up his attempt to practice law and return to the "advantages and delights of study."

"Let me tell you with rejoicings," he writes to his friend Dabney of his plans to go to Johns Hopkins. The year at Atlanta had been one of disillusionment. It had revealed to him the crude actualities of life in north Georgia as it was at that time.

When he feels himself blocked in his first essay at his problem, through the practice of law, he reforms his forces and attacks on a new front. He sees his own course with astonishing clarity. He writes to Ellen Axson, shortly after going to Johns Hopkins:

"In a word, my ambition could not be fulfilled at the bar: the studies for which I was best fitted, both by nature and by acquired habit, were not legitimate in a law office, and I was compelled in very justice to myself to seek some profession in which they would be legitimate. Evidently, however, there was small latitude of choice. A professorship was the only feasible place for me, the only place that would afford leisure for reading and for original work, the only literary berth with an income attached.

"True, professorships were scarce and hard to get, and professors could not participate actively in public affairs; but even a professorship might be gotten as soon as a competence at the bar, and the occupancy of office had never been an essential part of my program. Indeed, I knew very well that a man without independent fortune must, in any event, content himself with becoming an outside force in politics, and I was well enough satisfied with the prospects of having whatever influence I might be able to exercise make itself felt through literary and nonpartisan agencies." . . .

In short, if he could not reach his end directly by the beaten path of the law, the political organization, the State House, the Senate, he would do it by means of education and "literary and nonpartisan agencies." His end was still the same: "profound and public-spirited statesmanship." With his instinct for always seeking the most distinguished opportunity within his horizon, he would have gone to Germany to study, joining his friend Dabney—his letters are full of longing for that paradise of scholarship—but he had no money, he had never mastered the German language, and besides all that he had looked into the eyes of the demure daughter of the Manse at Rome.

Not at Once Engaged

No doubt his meeting with Ellen Axson in April, 1883, and the swift development of their love affair confirmed his decision, but his letters show that his course was already clear in his mind. He was not, indeed, engaged to be married until September, and he had applied in May for a fellowship at Johns Hopkins, which was denied him. In July (the 26th) we find him, fellowship or no fellowship, writing to President Daniel Coit Gilman that he proposes "to attend the session of Johns Hopkins during the coming winter, for the purpose of pursuing special studies in history and political science."

But Ellen Axson, if she was not the determining influence in his decision, was nevertheless a powerful stimulant in advancing his plans. She urged him always to "seek the highest things he felt in his soul." She confirmed him in his aspirations, cheered him in his struggle. Nothing was to stand in the way of the supreme end, not even their marriage.

Such was the ardent, high-spirited, clear-seeing, intensely ambitious young man of 27, who arrived in Baltimore on September 18, 1883. Only two days before he had become engaged to Ellen Axson, writing exultantly to his family about it on the train that was taking him North.

Johns Hopkins was then in the first flush of its splendid enthusiasm for scholarship. It had been organized only seven years before, and while its physical equipment was by no means equal to that of any one of several other American universities, it had an idea, a zest that set its students on fire. And it had a group of great teachers, great men, as its guides and leaders. While frankly modeled upon those thorough German universities which were attracting so many of the finest young scholars of the world, it had a quality of intellectual daring, a youthful enthusiasm that, as Wilson told his friend Dabney, made it "the best place in America to study."

Post-Graduate Student

Much as Wilson had looked forward to the opportunity at Johns Hopkins he was at first doubtful of the method, fearful of being "intellectually straitjacketed." By this time he had had no inconsiderable direct experience with colleges and universities, and he dreaded the "cramming process," the hard standardization of curricula rigidly adhered to, the deadening of strong individual interests and enthusiasms. He had been able, at Princeton and at the University of Virginia, to carry on his scheduled courses with his left hand, as it were, while he gave his main strength to his own deeply loved subjects.

Scholastic honors in themselves meant nothing to him. What he wanted was to master the subjects which appealed to the natural bent of his mind. His years of concentrated study at home, and during his experience at Atlanta, had only deepened and confirmed his belief that schools do not educate a man, but that he educates himself. He was much concerned over this problem upon entering Johns Hopkins—especially after he had looked over his schedule for his first term and found it made up of the usual "cut and dried" courses.

That schedule (as he sent it in a letter to Ellen Axson) was as follows:

MONDAYS
12-1 International Law* (with Professor Adams).
4-5 Advanced Political Economy (Dr. Ely).

TUESDAYS
12-1 International Law.

WEDNESDAYS
12-1 International Law.
4-5 Advanced Political Economy.

THURSDAYS
12-1 Sources of American Colonial History (Dr. Adams).

FRIDAYS
12-1 English Constitutional History (Dr. Jameson).
4-5 Advanced Political Economy.
8-10 Meeting of Seminary of Historical and Political Science.

*This is really a history of international relations. This schedule is for only the first term, up to Christmas.

The feature of the university to which he looked forward with the greatest eagerness was the Historical Seminary, of which Walter Page and other former students at Johns Hopkins had given glowing accounts. It was the veritable keynote of the system, an analogue, so far as the so-called cultural subjects were concerned, of the laboratory method pursued in the natural sciences. Professors, fellows and students were all brought together in the room in the old biological building devoted to the famous Bluntschli Library. Dr. J. C. Bluntschli was professor of international law at the University of Heidelberg, and upon his death the German citizens of Baltimore purchased his valuable library and presented it to Johns Hopkins.

In Great Company

Upon his first visit to the library Wilson was charmed with the place. It had the atmosphere of quiet studiousness, the "very aroma of books" which was dear to his soul. He felt that this, after all, was his home. There were small tables all about for the use of students and immediate access to the crowded volumes on the shelves. A motto from Freeman, painted in large letters at one end of the room, peculiarly defined his own sense of the relationship of his favorite studies:

"History Is Past Politics and Politics Present History."

But the center of all the interest was the long dull red seminary table around which gathered on Friday nights Dr. Adams' celebrated Historical Seminary. Dr. Adams himself sat at the head of the table, the shrewd and ardent umpire in that intellectual tournament. On his right sat diminutive Dr. Richard T. Ely, who was beginning his long career as a leader in American economic thought. He was only two years older than Wilson. On Adams' right was Dr. J. Franklin Jameson, tall, thin, scholarly looking, a fellow in the university, who was to become one of the most distinguished of American research historians. The other seats were occupied by a group of men who, judged by their later careers, may be called truly remarkable. Albert Shaw was one, long editor of the Review of Reviews;" Arthur Yager, whom Wilson afterward appointed as Governor of Porto Rico; Edward W. Bemis and Davis R. Dewey, noted economists; E. E. L. Gould, one-time chamberlain of New York City; Charles H. Levermore, winner of the Bok peace prize, and several others who attained distinction. It was the kind of group—with the meeting of nimble minds—that Wilson most loved.

Wilson soon became the "scribe" of the seminary, and there are many pages of the record in his beautiful clear handwriting. He also contributed a generous share to the discussion. He read aloud to the seminary the chapters of his book, "Congressional Government," as he completed them, subjecting them to the eager fire of discussion which followed.

At Johns Hopkins, as will be seen tomorrow, Wilson was "working himself to death," according to the doctor who finally took him in hand. How he labored is best told in his letters to Ellen Axson.

GIRL REFUSES TO YIELD KEY TO "LOOT CACHE"

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—Police late today will blow open a safety deposit box in a downtown bank in an effort to trace nearly $100,000 in loot, believed to have been cached there by the notorious Jaworski bandit gang.

Since her arrest Tuesday night, Elizabeth Jaworski, 24-year-old dark eyed sister of the Jaworski brothers, steadfastly has refused to turn over to police keys to the box known to be held in her name. As a last resort bank officials have agreed to the dynamiting program.

Elizabeth Jaworski, 24, alias Helen Logan, sister of Paul Jaworski, murdered and payroll bandit, who, with Jack Vasbinder, convicted murderer, shot his way to freedom from the county jail August 18, is being held in Detroit in connection with the jail break.

County detectives who went to Detroit to bring back Sam Jaworski, Paul's brother, who is charged with supplying the revolvers used in the jail break and participating in the battle with guards, say they have no direct evidence against Miss Jaworski, but that she is being held on suspicion that it was she who embraced Paul as he escaped jail and was being driven away in an automobile. Sam Jaworski was arrested in Detroit following a baking company holdup and was identified as the outside man in the jail delivery.

Pirates Will Win Today, Rogers Opines

FIRST NATIONAL STUDIOS, BURBANK, Cal., Oct. 7.—See where Secretary Kellogg sent word Mr. Borah that we were not only going to personally conduct the next Nicaraguan election, but if necessary the Marines would do a little voting on the side themselves. Secretary of Labor Davis was out to the studio here yesterday. He told me he can't find any classification of labor to put the movies in. Put 'em in politics and they still won't be in any classification.

Yours, WILL.

ROAD EMPLOYES HURT IN CRASH

When their automobile was crowded off the road by another car, Edward Burns, 50, of Elfinwild road, Aspinwall, and Joseph Hutter, 35, of 132 Emmett way, employes of the Allegheny county road department, were injured seriously today at Glenshaw. The men were pinioned under their machine, and each was cut on the throat by the broken windshield.

BAR LT. O'TOOLE AS DRUNK

Lieut. Martin O'Toole, attached to Oakland Police Station, was suspended by Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh on a charge of drunkenness and conduct unbecoming an officer, following an alleged attack on a newspaperman at Forbes Field yesterday.

Patrolman James Challis and Patrick Fitzgerald also were suspended in connection with the affair. O'Toole is said to have become abusive when he forced a truck, which was caught in a fender of the newspaperman's car, to continue along Boquet street.

STREET CAR DEATH OF MAN HELD ACCIDENT

"Accidental death" was the verdict of a coroner's jury today after hearing how, on August 29, Tony Ruskey, 37, Acmetonia, darted in front of a street car on the Freeport road near Springdale and was killed.

HELD IN JAIL BREAK

MISS ELIZABETH JAWORSKI

Pending questioning of Sam Jaworski, held in Detroit as the gunman who assisted Paul Jaworski, payroll bandit and murderer, and Jack Vasbinder, another murderer, to escape from county jail, Miss Elizabeth Jaworski is being held in Detroit. She is a sister of the jail breaker and his brother and [illegible], Detroit police say, of having piloted the machine in which the jailbreakers escaped.

John Nye Brings a Party To Aunt Em's Hostelry; Mr. Jerome Returns

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. Mrs. Jerome enjoys ill health so Sally does the housework mornings and office work afternoons. BEAU and MILLIE, her twin sister and brother, give so little toward the upkeep of the house that the whole load falls on Sally. TED SLOAN is in love with her and wants her to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests Sally is JOHN NYE, who is Millie's employer. He is blindly infatuated with Millie, but Millie prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON, although she says John would make a nice rich husband for her when her affection for Davidson should cool off. Millie's affairs always do end in coolness. While Mabel is looking for a job, Millie is discharged from John Nye's office because John "got fresh" with her. Mabel takes the job. One day Sally does her work for her, [illegible] is so cool to her that she leaves early. She thinks [illegible]y with her because she is Millie's sister, and he is [illegible]h Millie. That night, when Sally is on her way [illegible]rs to do an exhibition "shimmy" dance for the diners in Aunt Em's restaurant, she sees John standing with some people in the hall. Secretly ashamed of dancing in public, she wonders whether to go on with it or not.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"IF YOU'RE ashamed of this job you'd better go back to petting a typewriter!" said she, when she had dashed back into the kitchen. She always spoke her mind, no matter how many people were around.

"I'm not ashamed of my job! You know I don't mind waiting on table most of the time," Sally came back at her hotly.

"Well, then, what's the matter with you tonight?" Aunt Em wanted to know, rapping the table smartly with her knuckles.

"I just don't want to go in where John Nye is—" Sally began, when her aunt broke in once more.

"You don't know what you want to do!" she declared. "You act like a simpleton about that man. You always have—and he doesn't know you're on earth! I should think you'd have more pride, Sally Jerome! Go and take a look at him now. Making roly-boly eyes at some little yellow-headed girl in there——"

She waved a thin hand in the direction of the dining room.

Sally tiptoed out of the kitchen by the back door and went around the house to enter it by the side door.

Very softly she crossed the big, shadowy parlor, and looked through the wide-arched doorway into the dining room.

She could see John Nye and his party plainly. There were eight people—four men and four girls. They were talking and laughing together as they helped themselves to the fried chicken and shoe-string potatoes that Hilda was passing around their table.

That is, all of them were talking and laughing except John Nye himself. His face was very serious as he lifted a large piece of golden-brown chicken from the platter to his plate. And he was paying no attention to the small blond girl who sat next to him, flirting with him just as hard as she could.

"He doesn't look as if he were having such a riproaring time," Sally remarked to herself, hidden in the shadows of the high-ceilinged, old-fashioned room.

She went back to the kitchen and began to beat up biscuit with a right good will.

"John Nye was here tonight for dinner," she told Millie when that light-hearted flapper came breezing into the house at midnight.

"You don't say!" The sea-blue eyes opened wide between their blackened lashes, and the painted mouth tilted up in a sarcastic smile. "So he's coming around again—trying to make things up with me, is he? Well, it won't get him anywhere, because little Millie starts work for Davy Davidson's firm on Monday next!"

It was plain to Sally that she had lost all interest in John Nye. Without bothering to waste any more words on him she went dancing up the stairs to bed, the red silk clocks of her stockings flashing as she went.

[illegible] hear her humming [illegible] herself as she went [illegible] in her bedroom on her little [illegible].

Downstairs in the hot, bright kitchen, Sally went on washing cups and saucers and plates and silver.

That was always the last job of her long day. To wash the dishes and count them as she put them away on the shelves. Cups and saucers—and plates and silver. Cups—and saucers—

It was a long, monotonous job. Long and monotonous as Sally's days had begun to seem, of late.

"And so John Nye came here to see Millie!" she said to herself. "Then he must care for her after all."

By the first of September Mr. Jerome had settled down into the daily life of The House by the Side of the Road.

He lay, silent and uncomplaining, in the big bed that had been Millie's room for a while. Three times a day Sally carried upstairs to him the food that the doctor had ordered. Soup and cooked fruit, for the most part. He took it like an obedient child.

Four times a day she gave little Beauregard Jerome, Jr., the milk that was the staff of life to him. At 3 every afternoon she took him a tiny cup of orange juice, and fed it to him, sip by sip.

At 5 o'clock she made her father comfortable for the night, and then settled the baby into his own little crib for his long night's sleep. Beau and Mable had not even laid eyes on the baby for a week. Mable was working overtime at getting Beau back to the "straight and narrow."

At 6 Mrs. Jerome had her dinner in the little private dining room on the south side of the house. She ate it with a library book propped up before her on the table, and her feet resting on a stool under it.

"No one knows how sick I am," she often wailed. "I'm just as sick as your father is, but I won't give in to it. He's well enough to be out of bed—and he could get up just as well as not."

Sally was desperately sorry for her.

But there came a day when even Mrs. Jerome could not say that her husband was well enough to be out of bed.

It was a cold and rainy day in the middle of the month. All day rain had come down in sheets, and brown leaves had come blowing down from the trees.

At 4:30 Sally was practicing the Savannah Stomp in her room, and talking to her mother at the same time. Mrs. Jerome was complaining about a brand new pain in a brand new place.

"I never had one before in the small of my back," she groaned. "And it's such a different kind of pain. It just takes my breath away." She caught her breath to show what she meant.

"Maybe a cup of hot tea would do me good," she went on, and then stopped suddenly, her mouth open, her eyes fixed with questioning fear.

From Mr. Jerome's room there was the sound of a long-drawn gasp, and then a thud—as if a heavy body had fallen to the floor.

"What on earth is that noise?" asked Sally, stopping midway in her dance, with her arms still flung out at her sides, and her toe just grazing the floor.

CHAPTER LVI.

SALLY thought that her father was dead when she flung open the door of his room. He was lying on the floor, and his hands and face were the same shade as the bathrobe of gray Turkish toweling that was wrapped around him.

"He must have tried to get out of bed by himself," she wailed aloud, although there was no one in the darkened room with her. Mrs. Jerome, who avoided all unpleasant things as she would have avoided the black plague, had not followed her at the sound of that heavy fall.

She had stayed behind in the hall, waiting for Sally to go and find out what had happened, all by herself.

Sally lifted her father to the bed. He was singularly light and easy for her to pick up in her strong, young arms.

"Poor dad," thought Sally, and as she held him she suddenly felt closer to him than ever she had since the long-ago days when he had been a gay and chipper young man who had taken her to picture shows and the circus.

It seemed to her that she had forgotten how much she had loved him, all through those years, when he had left all of them alone to shift for themselves. But now it came surging back to her—that love for him. The love she had had for him when she was 9 years old.

She was crying softly as she picked up the telephone on the stand beside the bed, and gave Dr. Ambleside's number.

When she was speaking to him her father's eyelids fluttered up and he looked at her. His hands moved, locking themselves on his thin chest. Sally gave a great sigh of relief.

"Guess I must have got a little faint," he murmured thickly as she hung up the receiver and turned to him. "I thought I'd get up to get a drink of water. The thermos bottle was empty."

"My fault!" Sally blamed herself. It was the first time she had forgotten to keep the bottle filled with the special mineral water that Dr. Ambleside had ordered for Mr. Jerome.

But, somehow, it was easy to forget important things lately in The House by the Side of the Road. For there were so many, many things for Sally to do, and all of them important ones . . . The baby to be fed, bathed and tenderly watched from morning till night. Mr. Jerome to be cared for almost as carefully as the baby had to be cared for. Mrs. Jerome to be waited on, hand, foot and finger, all day long.

"And besides that, there's the downstairs work—and the dancing," thought Sally, hurrying down to the kitchen with the empty thermos bottle in her hands.

Today there had been an extra job. Aunt Em had decided she ought to have a new costume for the new dance—the Savannah Stomp. And so Sally had "thrown together" a gay gypsy costume of cheap, bright-colored calico, all sewed with little bells. She had planned to stitch it neatly late that night, when she could carry the electric sewing machine down into the dining room, where the noise of it would disturb no one.

It took hard figuring these days to do all the things that had to be done. "And then," said Sally to herself, "I never get caught up somehow."

With the bottle filled she rushed upstairs to give her father his drink of water, and to reassure her mother that he was all right.

But Sally, herself, was not at all sure that he was all right. He was so quiet and listless, somehow, as if he did not care whether he was alive or not.

For days she had been growing more worried about him, and her worry was reflected in her mirror-like face when she opened the door to Mr. Ambleside at 6 o'clock.

In the restaurant the three musicians who constituted Aunt Em's "jazz band" were tuning up. Aunt Em was giving Hilda, the waitress, several orders in her high-pitched voice. Upstairs the baby was wailing for no reason at all except that it was a baby and got its exercise by crying with all its might.

The front door opened and Millie came flying into the house, bringing the freshness of the rain with her.

She banged the door behind her and called out: "Well, I've had to quit another job!" in a loud, shrill voice before she caught sight of the doctor, who was halfway up the stairs.

He stopped, frowning down at her. Then he turned to Sally, who was just behind him.

"I asked you people to keep Mr. Jerome perfectly quiet," he said in that terrifying, solemn voice that doctors have. "Is this the way you do it?" He was plainly angry at the way his orders had not been carried out.

Scowling and shaking his head, he went into the sick room, smartly closing the door in Sally's face.

She stood, staring at it perplexedly for a moment. Then she turned and ran lightly down the stairs to ask the three musicians not to play that night.

Millie was in the room she had been sharing with Sally ever since her father's return, when Sally hurried into it and began to strip off the gypsy costume, garment by garment.

To Be Continued.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer — By John Held, Jr.

"My dear, I HONestly think NOIsy is an aCEPtion to pratically ALL the men you meet NOWadays because he is so sort of poLITE and all, do you know what I mean? ACtually, my dear, I bet you that if that odd soul ever wanted to KISS a girl he would ask perMIssion because he is SO darned poLITE all the time about everything, because I mean take f'r instance this HOUSE party that he and ARab and I went on together. NOIsy was AWfully sort of COURTeous, which I honestly think is TERribly unUSual in a boy NOWadays, my dear, because MOTHer says that boys NOWadays actually HAVEn't any manners and I think, mySELF, that HEAPS of youths I know are awfully RUDE, sort of, don't you really think they ARE? Well, ANYways, my dear, this odd Mrs. McTAVish, who gave this HOUSE party, you see, was honestly TOO imPRESSED with NOIsy because he was so awfully poLITE to her, so my dear, she honestly made a dead SET for him and it was really too perfectly SCREAMing because NOIsy hadn't the VAUGest iDEA how to esCAPE when she sort of CASurally apPROpriated him for an enTIRE EVEning—can you BEAR it, my dear? And of course ARab, my dear, pretended he thought NOIsy was rushing HER instead of HER rushing NOIsy because I mean you know he WOULD, my dear—he's just the TYPE. But you honestly should have SEEN NOIsy's exPRESsion when we KIDded him about it AFterwards, my dear, because I mean he was PRACticably ready to ROLL over and BUTter himself with disMAY!"

LOVE'S EMBERS

by Adele Garrison

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Noel Veritzen Hears a Name That Stirs Him Deeply

I WAS more disturbed than I cared to admit by Katie's revelations as to the queer actions of the mysterious foreign-looking men who had taken the shack on the land next to ours for the summer. That they would be most undesirable neighbors, especially with their ownership of the big powerful dog which they so nonchalantly asserted "would not bite if people kept perfectly still," I could see clearly, and realized also that Junior's enjoyment of the farm would be materially diminished if these men and the dog remained in such close proximity to us.

This was something which Dicky ought to handle, I decided, and although I knew his indolence and dread of any controversy, yet I also knew that any real or fancied danger to Junior would arouse him as nothing else could.

But long experience with my husband's foibles had taught me that his reaction to the seriousness of the situation would be in direct inverse proportion to the importance I placed upon it. Therefore I resolved to obey the Biblical injunction as to emulating the wisdom of the serpent, and tell the story of the affair to the group assembled on the veranda as if it simply were a humorous incident enlivening the monotonous routine of the farm life.

This would make it far easier for me, too, than if I consulted Dicky alone about the matter. Under the strain of our present relations any colloquy of ours with no other people present was bound to be a painful experience. Besides, I happened to know that Dicky was in an exceedingly difficult humor because of the wireless message from Philip Veritzen which he had transcribed for me, therefore I was relieved at the number of people on the veranda when I came through the front hall to the double doors opening upon it.

It is our favorite resting place in summer, the focal point for all our family group, this screened porch from which one's eyes can travel over our own broad lawn with its stately larches and elms across the road to meadows and woodland sloping gently to the ocean. The silhouettes of graceful church spires, the gleaming of white houses come to us from a nearby seaside village, while on clear days we can catch glimpses of ships and the sparkle of the ocean wave.

We have made it as comfortable and pretty as possible with easy, brightly-cushioned chairs, a couch hammock, low tables strewn with books, magazines and smoking conveniences and a porch wagon for the holding of the fruit drinks which Katie makes so well. There is rarely a waking hour of a pleasant day when some one at least of the family is not to be found out there.

I saw as I came through the doors that no one of our family group was missing. Mother Graham was lying in the couch-hammock—her favorite resting place. Katherine sat near her, reading, while at the other end of the veranda Mary Harrison and Noel Veritzen were chatting in chairs drawn as closely together as possible. Stretched out in an armchair by the reading table, with Junior on his knee, Dicky was entertaining his small son with a book he had brought from the city for him. It was an idyllic little family scene, and I felt a distinct pang as I realized that my appearance on it would bring to Dicky as to me the painful contrast of other summers and this, as far as our own relations were concerned.

But there was no hint of strain in the smiling courteous alacrity with which he sprang to his feet as I came through the door and drew forward a chair for me. Noel Veritzen also rose, and I noticed, as I often had done before, the touch of boyish shyness which oddly enough invests his actions. It is an appealing thing, but one hardly to be expected from a youth who has been compelled to face the world in as strenuous fashion as has he.

"You've all missed a most amusing bit of vaudeville," I said gayly.

"I'll bet Katie was in it," Dicky said lazily. "I heard her yowling for her 'Missis Graham.'"

"Katie was the heroine," I admitted, "but the heavy villians were the most interesting, a couple of Transvanians who are occupying that shack of Mr. Grimsey's in the woods adjoining ours."

Noel Veritzen leaned forward, his face alive with interest.

"Transvanians!" he said excitedly. "Did you say Transvanians?"

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Saturday, October 8.

I argue not against Heaven's hand or will.—MILTON.

THE forecast for this day may not be considered entirely propitious. While in business or professional affairs there may be lively action, the Saturn square to Luna may tend to thwart or postpone. There may be some treachery as well. Be careful also in domestic, social and affectional affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for an active year, but possibly with their best efforts frustrated or delayed. Cherish also domestic and affectional ties.

A child born on this day may be versatile and lively, but should be trained to overcome many setbacks and delays in life.

ELINOR GLYN tells the TRUTH about

Exacting Mother-Love

THERE was an admirable play in New York—it dealt with the devouring, obsessing mother-love which is such a feature in America. Every mother ought to go to see it, and then ask herself "Have I a touch of this 'mother-love' in me?" Because it is a natural animal instinct, and when the mind is not keen and deductive, can very easily turn into this selfish form of expression.

ELINOR GLYN

If you stop to think—you who read—I am sure each of you must know at least one or two cases among your friends where the mother has absolutely sapped all the initiative and character out of her children, be they daughters or sons—by her over and excessive exacting love. Of all forms of selfishness this is the worst, because it masquerades under the guise of a beautiful and laudable sentiment! And so it is incipient and never checked in the initial stages when perhaps it could be cured.

For what can be worse than thinking of your own pleasure in the expression of your love, and not of the effect of this expression upon your child! The play shows this intolerable selfishness. The truth of it lies in psychological and physiological facts, which it would be unpleasant to most women to face—but on the surface at least we can say that the animal frequently shows greater love than the human mother! This is because it invariably (except in one or two freak species) showers physical devotion and care upon its offspring during the period when it cannot fend for itself—then ceases its ministering when such ministering would hamper the progress of the creature in its fight for life.

If a mother has trained her children's sub-conscious minds in right thinking until they are 12 years old or even 14, she should then abdicate her place of authority, and act merely as advisory friend, never demanding sacrifices or attention and thinking of the good of the child before she accepts even voluntary proffered ones.

STARK FAILS TO GET APPEAL PUT AHEAD

An attempt to have the Superior Court advance the appeal case of Sidney L. Stark, who seeks to gain possession of his 3-year-old boy, abducted from the mother and later awarded to her by the lower court, has been refused by the Superior Court. It is said Stark threatened to take the boy and go to Europe.

Mrs. Martha K. Stark, who left Stark, taking her baby with her, because of Stark's alleged ill treatment, is living in the home of W. H. Walker, former dean of Duquesne University. Mrs. Stark is employed there as supervising housekeeper and secretary to Mrs. Walker. Mrs. Stark says she is there with her husband's knowledge and consent.

When she first left Stark, whose income is said to be in excess of $5,700 a year, Mrs. Stark accepted a position in the home of H. P. Hopwood, of Uniontown. She is earning $15 a week in the Walker home, her only income, she says.

COUNTY SLIP-UP COSTS $30,000

A change of mind by the County Commissioners will cost the county $30,000.

Several months ago the county ordered the Pittsburgh, Des Moines Steel Company to vacate its quarters in the Curry Building, which the county planned to raze. These plans have been abandoned, but yesterday the Commissioners approved the payment of $30,000 to the steel company as the difference between the amount of rent it would have paid in the Curry Building and that being paid for its new quarters.

RAID HOME OF MOTORMAN

Shortly after complaints that his home was a drinking rendezvous for street car men were received by police, Lieut. Elias Wentzel, of the Frankstown Avenue Police Station, with a squad raided the home of John B. Scavio, a street car motorman, of 7327 Frankstown avenue. Fifty half-pints, 20 pints and two five-gallon cans of moonshine whisky were seized, it is said. Scavio was arrested on a charge of violating the Snyder act, and later was released on $300 bail.

RAILROAD HERO GIVEN MEDAL

P. J. Reidy of 811 Lime street, South Side, Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad employe, was awarded the New York Central Lines' medal of valor yesterday in recognition of an act of heroism almost a year ago. Reidy, an assistant storekeeper at the McKees Rocks yards, rescued a boy who, while sled riding, slipped under a moving freight train and was being dragged along the rails. The medal was presented by P. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central. Fourteen other employes were presented medals at the same time.

DEATH ROLL

Mrs. Theodore Brown.

Mrs. Anna Loomis Brown, 76, died Thursday in her home, 628 Sheridan avenue. Mrs. Brown was born in Burlington, N. Y. She was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension. She leaves her husband, Theodore Brown; three sons, Howard and Theodore Brown, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and Norman K. Brown of Chicago, and two daughters, Mrs. George H. Rankin and Miss Minnie L. Brown.

Mrs. William H. Francis.

Mrs. Annie Francis, 69, wife of William H. Francis, died Wednesday in her home at 206 Noah street, Greenfield. Mrs. Francis was a member of the Squirrel Hill Christian Church. She leaves, besides her husband, four sons, William H., Cliff J., Ernest and Aden G. Francis, and three daughters, Miss Mabel and Miss Violet Francis and Mrs. Weidman.

Mrs. Arthur G. Underwood.

Mrs. Mary Underwood, 57, wife of Arthur G. Underwood, died Wednesday in her home at Rosedale stop, Verona. Mrs. Underwood was a resident of the Oakmont-Verona district for the past 30 years. She leaves, besides her husband, three sons, Arthur, Jr., Albert and George Underwood.

Dollar or Dime a Drink--Same Poison

By Universal Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—"Dollar a drink clubs with elite customers serve precisely the same poison as the dime-a-shot dives of the wharf sides."

Maj. Chester P. Mills, former prohibition administrator for this district, makes that statement in an article in the current issue of Collier's Weekly.

He adds: "During the twelve months ending last June, government chemists analyzed 480,000 gallons of alcohol and 99 per cent showed traces of poisonous denaturant."

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur G. Weimer, of Coraopolis, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Gyla Weimer, and John Melvin Gardiner, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Gardiner, of Mt. Lebanon, which was solemnized yesterday at noon in the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue. Only the immediate families witnessed the ceremony, which was followed by a breakfast in the William Penn Hotel.

CLUB CONGRESS BRANCH PLANS FOR LUNCHEON

The department of education, legislation and fine arts of the Congress of Clubs will have a harvest home luncheon Wednesday in the clubhouse. The honor guests who will speak are Mrs. Charles Long of Wilkes-Barre, chairman of applied education and fine arts in the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, and Miss Helen Gregg, director of Pittsburgh school lunch rooms. Music will be supplied by Mrs. Adele Eggers Furniss, soprano; Mrs. Hilda Reiber Frank, violinist, and Mrs. Emily D. Boydston, accompanist. Reservations are to be made either at the clubhouse office or with Mrs. Bruce Cobaugh.

The first meeting of the American Association of University Women will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Congress of Clubs with Dr. Irene Davis Ferguson presiding. Miss Elizabeth Lee, a Mount Holyoke graduate and a returned missionary from China, will speak on the plan of the round table on international relations which she will conduct throughout the year. Miss Lee attended Williams College this summer as a member of the school on international politics. Miss Harriet Morgan will speak on elementary education and Miss Thelma Satterlee on the pre-school child. Mrs. James H. Greene will have charge of the music which will be presented by Mrs. C. H. Aufhammer, soprano, and Miss Marion Garland, assisted by Dr. Marion Sheppard, Miss Edith Ely, and Miss Caryl Reynolds will be hostess for the tea following the meeting.

In order not to conflict with the State Federation convention, the Thursday Afternoon Club of Wilkinsburg moved its meeting a week ahead, opening its season yesterday with a luncheon in the Morrowfield Hotel. There was a large attendance of members and guests and the affair was marked by attractive decorations in the club colors, green and white. Mrs. H. S. Loomis presented the new president, Mrs. A. L. Schieber, and the program was given by Mrs. Vivian Fay, who contributed soprano solos and readings, Mrs. Schieber accompanying her. The next meeting has been changed to the home of Mrs. V. W. Fugate on Barnes street.

The Outlook Alliance entered its twenty-first year with the president's day reception yesterday in the Congress of Clubs. The past presidents, officers and directors received with the new executive, Mrs. H. D. Stark, who was introduced by her predecessor, Mrs. Aden L. Fillmore. In her address of response Mrs. Stark elaborated on the purpose of the organization—the promotion of acquaintance and mutual helpfulness among women and the attainment of a larger social, intellectual and ethical life. A trio from the music department of Carnegie Institute of Technology, including Miss Lucille Burrel, piano; Miss Virginia Brockhart, violin, and Miss Grace Bazell, cello, furnished the musical program and Mrs. D. K. Ballard gave readings. Mrs. Florence Stewart Blackmore, who was in charge of the program, presented Mrs. Stark with a corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley tied with the club colors, burnt orange and yellow. Mrs. Carl E. Cosiowsky, president of the Congress, spoke informally in congratulation and nearly a dozen other presidents also were guests. Mrs. J. R. Colclough and her social committee were assisted by Mrs. Edward Hageman and her co-workers of the hostess committee during the tea hour.

The board of managers of the Pennsylvania Congress of Parents and Teachers will hold its preconvention meeting Tuesday morning at the Hotel Schenley. Preceding the morning sessions Wednesday and Thursday, October 19 and 20, an institute on publicity will be held. The director of the national publicity bureau, Mrs. Laura Underhill Kohn, will conduct the classes, which will be held in the headquarters, Hotel Schenley.

Since the theme of the convention is "Our Responsibility to the Child," the Wednesday afternoon session will be devoted to "Parental Education." Dr. Thomas W. Galloway, director of the Department of Educational Features of the American Social Hygiene Association, will give an address, "Training Youth for Parenthood." Following discussion of this paper, there will be an address by Dr. Roswell H. Johnson, president of the American Eugenics Association, on "Guiding Boy-Girl Relationships in Adolescence." Mrs. Edgar E. Weimer, Lebanon, Pa., first vice president of the Pennsylvania Congress, will preside at this session.

The Kaednege Society will meet Thursday in the East Liberty Presbyterian Church and luncheon will be served by the following committee: Mrs. H. L. Hetzel, Mrs. S. B. Heppenstall, Mrs. Reta Ferguson, Mrs. F. C. Orr, Mrs. W. K. Deitz, Mrs. A. C. Toner, Mrs. John Morris, Mrs. W. H. Ludebuehl and Mrs. S. M. Jones.

At the third of the forum suppers at Central Branch Young Women's Christian Association Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock Miss Sara M. Soffel will speak on "Outstanding Events of the Day," the first of her season's talks on current events. Special musical features are being arranged.

* * *

'The Sweetest Day'

Saturday, October 8th

In the rush and whirl of the present day life, we are prone to forget the finer sentiments—the sentiments upon which civilization is founded.

The people of today have the same tender feelings they had a generation ago. They still cling with everlasting reverence and love to their mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers, but amid all this confusion there is, at times, a tendency for such thoughts to remain hidden.

In order that everyone may have an opportunity to express their appreciation of these good thoughts and deeds, there has been set aside, one day out of each year, a day dedicated to the better things in life, and known as "The Sweetest Day in the Year."

There is Mother, who has always stood back of us thru thick and thin; there is Father, who, altho somewhat severe at times, always had that thought behind his actions and deeds that would help make us big men and big women; there are our Brothers and Sisters who have helped us fight our battles in numerous ways; there is our Wife, our partner in life, who is always ready to help the good cause along; there are the Kiddies who come running down the walk to meet us only looking forward to "That Smile" that means so much to them; and last but not least, your Sweetheart.

Isn't the "Sweetest Day in the Year" a grand opportunity for all of us to express our thoughts in a material way and show and prove conclusively to those dear to us that we sincerely and truly appreciate all their good thoughts and deeds? Let us not let a single instance go by to "Make Somebody Happy," to "Make Somebody Glad," on this one day of each year.

This is the "Sweetest Message ever told," and that is one of the reasons why this day is called "The Sweetest Day of the Year."

GREEN, LABOR CHIEF, KAYOS COMMUNISM

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Communism was stamped under foot and tossed out of the convention hall of the American Federation of Labor here yesterday. William Green, whose championship of labor took him from the depths of a mine to the presidency of the Federation, brought up the subject of communism and disposed of it in this way:

"My friends, the American Federation of Labor will accept no dictation from Moscow; we will not compromise with communism or communistic philosophy.

"We will not listen to the call of any siren; we will not experiment with the lives of workingmen and women in something which found birth in class hatred in a country ruled by dictators for centuries."

STEEL MAGNATE TAKES OWN LIFE

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 7.—(AP.)—While members of his family were packing for a trip to Europe late yesterday, John Stambaugh, 65-year-old steel magnate and director of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, committed suicide at the Trumbull county estate, "The Chalet."

Stambaugh, one of the wealthiest men in Youngstown, suffered a breakdown last winter after the completion of the Henry M. Stambaugh Memorial Auditorium, built with $1,500,000 left to this city by his brother, and had not regained his health.

When his wife and son, John, heard a shot they ran to the lawn and found Mr. Stambaugh's body in some shrubbery.

Because of his illness, Mr. Stambaugh had planned to resign from the Federal Reserve Bank directorate when his term expired at the end of this year.

He was director of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company. His parents were pioneers of the Mahoning valley and his father, John Stambaugh II, was president of the Brier Hill Iron and Coal Company, which became the nucleus of the Brier Hill Steel Company, now part of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company.

TO KILL FIGHT FILM LAW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Repeal of the Federal law barring transportation of prize fight films in interstate commerce is called for in a bill Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat, of New York, will introduce at the forthcoming session of Congress, he announced.

"The government, like Gene Tunney, hands out a one-two to the jaw, but neglects to guard the solar plexus, he said. "It permits vivid descriptions of fights over the radio, so vivid, due to the eloquence and imagination of the broadcaster, that one feels the blows as they land.

"Yet, the transportation of moving picture films of this same fight is prohibited in order that the screen portrayal might not 'interfere with the people's sense of refinement.'"

LINEMAN DIES TO SAVE STUDENTS

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 7.—(INS.)—James G. Campbell, 33, a lineman employed by the Penn Public Service Corporation, was electrocuted at the public school grounds at Portage, near here, when he took hold of an electric wire to prevent an iron fence around the school from being charged and endangering the lives of children at play, according to word received here today.

Campbell died instantly. He was one of a crew engaged in changing the overhead wiring at Portage, but was on the ground when the wire fell and was credited with saving the lives of many children by his death.

LOSES $1,000 PIN TO HOTEL THIEF

A diamond bar pin valued at $1,000 was stolen from beneath a pillow in the room of Mrs. G. E. Gates of Wheeling in the Roosevelt Hotel, according to a report to detectives.

Mrs. A. S. Reed reported yesterday that when she entered her offices in the Ferguson Building she found a man rifling her purse. When the man saw her, she said, he handed her $2 of the $3 he had removed from her purse and fled into the corridor with $1.

METALLURGISTS' CLUB ELECTS WARREN, O., MAN

Philip H. Parker of Warren, O., has been elected president of the Miners' and Metallurgists' Club at the Carnegie Institute of Technology for the present year. The club is composed of students enrolled in the department of mining and metallurgical engineering. Wilbur H. Seifert of Greensburg was named as secretary-treasurer and Earl S. Greiner of Lebanon, Pa., is the new vice president.

COUNTY LETS CONTRACTS FOR PARK ANIMAL RANGE

Contracts for erection of fencing to enclose the deer and buffalo ranges in the new county parks were awarded by county commissioners yesterday to the Cyclone Fence Company. The South Park fence will cost $10,344.50 and that in the North Park $6,720.85.

Listen World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

The Mysteries

YOU feel Mysteries in life. You feel them brushing against you like great wings in the night. Ever since you were a little child you have felt them. They were not merely the things you did not know. They were the things that no one could know, except God.

The mystery of Beauty? If the world is as cruel and bestial as some people say, why does Beauty exist? Why are skies rose, amber and amethyst at sunset? Why is dawn like a leaping fountain against the sleeping hills? Wild geese across a wintery sky—wind blown foam above a wave—a gnat's wing, veined and tinted like a jewel—what purpose does such vast and delicate beauty serve? Is it, perhaps, the reflection of another world, seen through this world's dingy veil?

The mystery of Love—of Sacrifice—of Courage and Faith—flaming like tall, white candles above our greed and hate—

The mystery of You, Yourself—the scientists say you are only a bundle of water and clay. Then why do you thrill and tingle and burn to all this loveliness and nobility? Why do you seem to move within yourself like a stranger in a clumsy house? Why do you always seem to be remembering things that, in this life you had never known? Why are you always listening to a voice that no one else can hear?

Mysteries—brushing against you like great wings—lifting you up, like wings, above this world's sordidness and discouragement.

But sometimes you forget the Mysteries. Sometimes you fall back into the belief that life is only that which you can see and touch and taste and hear and smell. Sometimes the material world closes all around you like a cell and all your candles go out and you are utterly miserable—then you shrivel into yourself and grow bitter and desperate.

Then, suddenly, you feel the Mysteries again!

You hear of some gallant deed, deneat great cost—you see a young tree trembling against the rising moon—or watch the love in the eyes of some mother toiling for her child—or hear a whole nation catch its breath at the courage of a flying boy—

And instantly life grows great and beautiful and worthwhile once more and you are flooded with eagerness and faith again. Then you are sure that there is meaning to it all—and that the shining trail goes on and on and on.

When you grow desperate do not struggle and debate or tear your heart with hateful doubts and sneers. Be still and wait—and presently some Mystery will come to cheer you, like great white wings that beat unfaltering through the night.

Changing Money

In English money, 20 shillings make a pound and 4 pounds equal 80 shillings. A shilling is very nearly the same as our quarter.

But how much is 4 pounds in United States money at the normal rate of exchange?

One of the amounts marked by a letter (A to G) is very close to 4 pounds in value. Which is it?

Yesterday's Answer

The circumference of the drum was nearly 19 feet. To guess 19, exceptional; 18-20, very good; 16-22, good; 15-24, average; 14-25, fair; less than 12 or more than 26, poor.

CHIC CHERIE — A Lovely Disposition! — LATEST FASHIONS

This is the opening night of a play that evidently everybody who is anybody is going to see. Cherie stands to the left of the picture and watches the lovely fashions go by. The evening wrap with the roses is a cape of velvet with three tiers of ruffles and a top that blouses when it is properly drawn up around one's hips. Next is a metal brocade coat in silver and gold and green, trimmed with white fox. Third is a wide-sleeved coat that flares out around the bottom—this one of embroidered velvet with a stole of soft bushy fur in gray to match the wrap. Cherie stands and looks and looks

This is something quite unusual. An evening ensemble—a dress of black transparent velvet brocaded in silver and a wrap of the sheer velvet that has a triple tiered cape collar. Cherie admires it so much that she forgets she is waiting for Andy to find the tickets and that the curtain has gone up.

There's much to be said for Cherie's own wrap—white fox, silver and black brocade and a black velvet flaring ruffle for a skirt. There's even more to be said for her sweet disposition, thinks Andy—who doesn't know that a fashion show is better to Cherie than a first night almost any time at all!

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

ANTIDOTES FOR LOVE

"LOVE makes time pass—and time makes love pass."

TIME—enough of it—will positively cure the most ardent and poignant love that ever existed! But, dear me! What a slow, old homeopathic remedy it is!

In these days, when a man's love passes so quickly and unceremoniously from one woman to another, a girl should keep a five-foot shelf full of quick-action antidotes for shattered illusions, heart-wounds and acute pains in the vanity.

HELEN ROWLAND

Love is becoming like bootleg liquor—so artificial that almost before you get the kick or the dizzy feeling, you feel the headache and the remorse coming on. Every summer, love-affairs, like skirts, get shorter and shorter and thinner and thinner!

The QUICKEST antidote for love, of course, is—another love. The quickest way to erase one face from the tablet of memory, is to draw another across it. But that is the way of the dope-addict, the toper and the weakling.

Why try to cure one headache by acquiring another? Why try to put out the fire of champagne by pouring beer on top of it? It will only give you a worse fit of remorse and make you feel dizzier, a little sicker and a lot cheaper.

* * *

When one man has filled you with wrath, disgust or an inferiority complex, stabbed you in the heart or the vanity or wounded your self-esteem, it is awfully comforting to have somebody else come along and tell you how sweet and wonderful and adorable you are.

When you are suffering from love's hangover, almost anything in tweeds or blue serge or a dinner coat looks just like Fate or Prince Charming!

But that lonesome, "nobody-loves-me" feeling has led to more unhappy marriages and bitter mistakes than anything else in the world.

A far safer and saner and healthier antidote for love is HARD WORK. Plunging into your job, putting all your energy and creative force into doing something worth while, whether it's writing a novel, making over the living room curtains or learning to run a car, will take your mind off a man's kisses and make you forget how he looked when he lied to you under the moon.

And there is TRAVEL. Getting away from the old scenes and meeting new faces will sometimes make you see your lost lover in another light, take all the glamour off of him and make him appear as small as a two-spot beside four aces.

* * *

The only way for a woman to be happy in this world is to take men as they come and let them go as they GO! To write "Finis" at the end of a summer idyl with a smile and a steady hand. It doesn't really matter how often your heart is broken, if you never permit your spirit to be broken or your ideals to be shattered. "So long as the DREAMS be fine and fair, Molly, Molly, what do YOU care?" Keep your DREAMS—and forget all the rest!

For the Lovelorn

Slow, But Sure

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am sure you appreciated reading "A Decent Fellow's" letter as much as I did. I certainly am glad to find there are still some young men who are not ashamed to assert their ideas. A few words to "A Decent Fellow:" I was delighted, in reading your letter, to find that you wrote that a majority of the girls here indulge in smoking and drinking. You did not say all of them. I happen to be one who doesn't as I am of the same opinion as our advisor, Miss Gale, that a girl in order to have a fellow respect her should not indulge in smoking and drinking. It certainly is "low and degrading" and I can't see how so many girls have the nerve to do it. But I wish to tell you this, my friend, I have lost a good many male friends because I would not pet with them. You did not mention this (referring to petting) in your letter which puts me under the impression that you consider it all right. I hope you don't because this is one of the things which are the cause of a girl losing her self-respect. I wish you all the luck in finding a respectable girl for your wife. Miss Gale, I wish to congratulate you on your wonderful advice although I have never written before to receive any myself.

SLOW BUT SURE

I am glad you have such high standards, my dear.

Puzzled

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am going to ask for your advice. I am a young man at the age of 23. I go with a girl who is 20 and I love her most dearly. We quarrel often and it is mostly on account of her girl friend. We have been engaged for the last five months, but she still goes about with others. Do you think she is doing right, or is it that she doesn't care for me? She also goes out motoring riding with different boy friends, and that causes ill feelings on my part for I think she is wrong. Miss Gale would you please let me have your opinion on this subject?

PUZZLED.

I don't blame you for resenting your fiancee's actions, Puzzled. If you are engaged, she should not go out with other boys. Talk it over and tell her just how you feel.

I Am Troubled

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl in my teens and I am troubled. There is a boy in this town who likes me well. At first when I met him he was a perfect gentleman, but now if I go with him he wants to pet. I don't like that, Miss Gale. I think these four things, smoking, kissing, petting and drinking are a ruination to the world, and I try to tell him that but he does not believe it. He says I am only slow but I will not belittle myself on his account. So I thank you for your space and time and hope you can tell me what I can do to cure him.

I AM TROUBLED.

No doubt this boy does agree with you in his heart, and he certainly has a lot more respect for you than he would if you agreed to let him kiss you.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland, M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Ills Due to Pampered Appetites Yield Only to Sacrifices.

FAILURE of the digestive organs to do their work perfectly produces a group of familiar symptoms, usually referred to as "dyspepsia."

So well understood are the effects of this ailment that it is not uncommon for any cross, irritable and undernourished person to be spoken of as a "dyspeptic." As a term of derision, this epithet is thrown at stubborn, disagreeable persons who haven't learned how to say "no" in an attractive way."

DR. COPELAND

Many a man has belched gas and slime, had bloating and a sense of fullness in the abdomen, suffered from constipation, and been a "grouch," all through the years of a long life. He has been a typical dyspeptic, but in spite of it, may be well nourished and to all physical appearances a perfectly normal individual.

It is the exception that proves the rule, they say. So the man who lives out his expectation in spite of years of dyspepsia, must be counted the exception. In general, the health is more or less impaired by constant symptoms of indigestion. On this account, they should be overcome.

Faulty eating habits are the chief cause of dyspepsia.

I approach this phase of the subject, always, with a feeling of reserve. Why? Because it is almost useless to argue with a man about his appetites. He will respond to every demand except to give up something.

Some years ago I worked out a series of exercises for use on the phonograph. The manufacturers told me they wouldn't be popular. Of course I wanted to know why. "They are too strenuous. Everybody wants to get thin, but not by hard work. You find a way to take off 10 pounds a day by crooking the little finger and the records will sell like hot cakes!"

He was right about it. Folks hate to make physical sacrifices.

You are fond of candy, cake, pie, ice cream, and every other fat-producing food. You put three lumps of sugar in every cup of coffee and probably take this beverage at each meal.

Fermentation is promoted by excessive use of the same articles of food that add weight to the body. If you are a dyspeptic and want to get well, you will be obliged to modify your diet.

Not only is constipation the result of indigestion, but also it is a factor in aggravating the dyspeptic condition. You must get rid of the costiveness to relieve the uncomfortable symptoms of delayed digestion.

Answers to Health Queries.

V. A. Q.—How can lemon juice be used as a bleach?

A.—I would advise that you use equal parts lemon juice and peroxide. Follow this by gently massaging with cold cream, as it is apt to prove drying to the skin.

* * *

K. I. T. Q.—What causes canker sores in the mouth?

2. Do you recommend a tonic for dry hair?

3. How can I get rid of pimples?

A.—This usually indicates an acid in the system. Correct the diet and avoid constipation. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2. Yes. For particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

3. Correct the diet by cutting down on sugars, starches and coffee. Eat simple food. Overcome any constipation. Exercise and lots of fresh air are essential. For details send a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

S. B. Q.—Is there any cure for a paralyzed nerve in a patient's face? Would electric massage be helpful?

A.—I would suggest that you remove the cause. Consult your doctor and have him determine the cause and prescribe the necessary treatment.

Ready to drop by noontime

SHE seemed to stay tired. Dragging through the hours—her lightest task too heavy. . . . What was the matter? Why, she used to be full of life and energy! What trick of fate had stolen her health? Had sapped her strength and set her nerves on edge?

Constipation takes awful toll from thousands of men and women. It thieves vitality. It wrecks energy. It dulls the heart and drives the body to pain. It destroys beauty and health itself, and often leads to serious disease. Yet it can be so easily prevented—so surely relieved! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation—safely and promptly. To prevent this common curse ever starting its course.

ALL-BRAN vs. part-bran

It has "bulk" that relieves constipation. ALL-BRAN is all bulk. This bulk absorbs moisture and carries it throughout the intestines, at the same time gently distending them — purifying, removing poisonous wastes.

How different from part-bran products—in which the quantity of bulk is so small that there is seldom enough to be effective. That is why doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. Because it is 100% bran.

Beware of drugs!

Contrast healthful ALL-BRAN with habit-forming pills and drugs, which often become useless unless the dose is constantly increased! ALL-BRAN is delicious with milk or cream. And add fruits or honey for an extra treat. Let it soak in the milk for a few moments to bring out all its rich, nutty flavor. Serve it with other cereals. In soups. Try the recipes on every package. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal.

Don't risk a part-bran substitute. Insist on genuine Kellogg's—the original ALL-BRAN. Sold by all grocers. Served at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias—on dining-cars. Made by the Kellogg Company in Battle Creek, Mich. Write for free "Treatise on Constipation."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

BASES FULL AND BABE UP -:- BUT HE FORCES MATE AT PLATE

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

PITTSBURGH'S BEST — FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1927 — TWENTY-NINE

AN IDEAL SITUATION, BUT IT DOESN'T PAN OUT.

As tense a situation as any Babe Ruth shouter could conceive came up during the eighth inning of the second game of the world series between the Pirates and Yankees at Forbes Field yesterday. The bases were full with one out and two runs in when the mighty Babe strode to the plate. Cvengros, who had relieved Aldridge shortly before, was pitching. The Babe hadn't hit a home run, and, with the Pirates well behind, the fans were clamoring for him to pound out one with the bases loaded. The first pitch was a ball. It was low. Then Babe took a cut at the next one and smashed it at Grantham, playing close in, and George easily nipped Pitcher Pipgras at the plate on a force play, as pictured above. Inset shows Ruth at bat in the crisis.

YANKEES' STADIUM RIOT OF COLOR

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Sixty-five thousand fans jammed every nook and cranny of this immense steel and concrete stadium this afternoon to see the Pittsburgh Pirates clash with the New York Yankees in the third game of the world series. The place was a riot of color, with flags and bunting strung across the grandstand boxes; women in bright raiment; ushers in bright red coats; a band on the field in smart grey and the ball players in their grey and white uniforms.

The weather was ideal. A benign sun beamed down upon the gorgeous spectacle of this cheering, excited assemblage of men and women. The atmosphere was balmy, and a gentle breeze blew across the playing field.

All the glamor of a world series was here. The crowd, the excitement, the game itself.

With their backs to the wall, Pittsburgh faced the slugging Yankees. They had dropped two straight in their home town and realized they must win today to avert almost certain and humiliating defeat in the series. For the Yanks were out to win four in a row, a feat that has not been accomplished in a world series since the Boston Braves captured four consecutive games from the Philadelphia Athletics in 1914.

The Yankees, in their home uniforms of white, with black caps and black stockings, were first on the

Series Sidelights

By LES CONKLIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Little old New York put its eye to the knothole in the baseball fence today.

And a fan has no hometown—they came from the four compass points of the baseball country to line up through the night outside the bleacher gate of the Yankee Stadium.

Several hundred brothers and sisters under the baseball skin saw the dawn together. Camp stools, sandwiches, phonographs, literature and even portable radios were on line.

Long before midnight, John Green of Washington, D. C., Negro, won the coveted first position in line. He had seen the games at Pittsburgh and had to hurry to make history.

Green proudly displayed a gold baseball watch charm presented to him by Walter Johnson, Washington hurling ace. Green spent a great part of the night paging another fan on the same line last year who had debated with him concerning one of those delicate shades of opinion dear to the heart of baseball fans. Green had brought a clipping from the Washington Times of a game played May 8, 1898, to settle the question.

The second in the queue was Frank Higgins, a one-legged newspaper vendor of Troy, N. Y., who had hitchhiked from home to witness the Pirates-Yanks battle.

The first woman to appear in line was Geraldine Scaramo, 25, of New York. She came with her husband. The other baseball sentries gallantly suggested she go home and get some sleep and they would reserve her place for her. She did and the fans kept their promise.

But toward dawn the coming of the prettier sex became so frequent that gallantry gave place to every fan for himself or herself. The second and third women in line were Miss Mollie Murphy and Miss Anna Sullivan of Seattle, Wash. They had been unable to buy reserved seats.

Udell David, Negro, of Des Moines, Ia., was the life of the party. David sat on his camp stool and entertained the night watchers with ukelele solos. Many alleged singers joined in the chorus.

Clinton K. Bowers, hailing from Mississippi, was another fan with talent. Bowers can dance on a dime. To the blare of a phonograph accompanied by various other instruments along the line, Bowers did his stuff.

All in all, it was all a cop could do to get a wink of sleep.

By Associated Press.

The Pirates went out to bat with Emil Yde, a husky left hander, pitching for the practice. The Pirates were not slamming out the long drives the Yankees hit in batting practice, but they were hitting on a line and Wright and Traynor in their first times up crashed a couple which would have rewarded them with extra bases.

Pennock and Meadows posed together for photographers as the Yankees went through a fast fielding practice. As he warmed up Pennock showed no signs of having an injured knee, bruised by a practice line drive before the series opened.

BUCS' CHANCES FADE, BUT THERE'S HOPE

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

THE Pirates have not played championship baseball in the two games in which they have suffered defeat at the bludgeons of the New York Yankees, and only in the prospect that they still will find themselves in the games in New York beginning today lies the hope that they may yet come through and win the world series.

There is no doubt that the Buccaneers have been below standard in the games at Forbes Field. They couldn't win yesterday against the superior pitching of George Pipgras, but they should have won the opening game on Wednesday, so that the worst they have deserved to date is an even break. As matters have turned out, they find themselves two games down with the necessity of winning four of a possible five games in order to beat their way to the top.

That appears to be an insurmountable task, but it is not a hopeless one by any means. A brace such as the Bucs took against Washington two years ago will turn the trick.

AFTER yesterday's game, I asked an American League scribe in the press box what he thought about the situation.

"The Pirates looked terrible," he said. "They haven't had a good day yet, and couldn't have won the National League pennant with the brand of ball they are playing now. They ought to snap out of it soon. I don't like to say it, but in the two games they have lost they appeared to be scared of their own shadows. They have been stiff and tense, and, as a

MISS NINA BELLE HURST

The world series each year attracts sports fans from all corners of the earth, as the case of Miss Nina Belle Hurst bears witness. Miss Hurst came to Pittsburgh to "cover" the series for Pacific Coast newspapers. She was called to Pittsburgh after "doing" a few stories in London and Paris, arriving in New York Tuesday noon. Her home is in Los Angeles, where she is well known in semi-pro baseball circles as a promoter and umpire.

FIGHT RESULTS

At London—Willie Smith defeated Teddy Baldock, 15 rounds.

At Brooklyn—Phil McGraw won on foul over Sid Terris, two rounds; Bobby Burns defeated Jimmy Britt, 10 rounds; Jack Duffy defeated Frankie Fink, 10 rounds; Roberto Roberti and Jack Townsend drew, six rounds; Hilly Levine defeated Willie O'Connell, four rounds.

At Chicago—Sammy Baker defeated Billy Alger, 10 rounds; Roleaux Seguero won by technical knockout over Art Weigand, one round; Lope Tenerio defeated Russ Whalen, 10 rounds.

At Clarksburg, W. Va.—Ray Fay knocked out Frank Martasso, six rounds; Eddie Rosen knocked out Joe Valdeck, five rounds.

GRAYS TO MEET ALL-STARS

The American League Barnstormers under Earl Mack are slated to meet the Homestead Grays in the first of a series of four games tomorrow afternoon at Forbes Field at 3 o'clock.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Don't begin to count the Pittsburgh cause as lost just because they failed again yesterday, as they did on Wednesday, and are now two games behind the Yankees in the world series without a single victory to their own credit.

It's a tough situation, no disputing that, as to win out now in the face of the heavy odds against them, the Buccos must bag four of the next five games, or .800 ball, whereas the Yankees can cinch the big title by playing merely .400 ball and taking just two games of the remaining five. The New Yorkers have such an advantage that they can afford to lose two games and still be on even terms with the Buccaneers.

YET the trick has been turned before. In 1921, it will be remembered, the Yankees not only defeated the Giants in the first two games of the world series, but shut them out both times. While the fans were speculating as to whether the Yanks would make a clean sweep, the Giants suddenly pulled themselves together, regained their batting eyes and won the series by taking five of the next six games. The series was played on a best-five-out-of-nine basis that year.

In 1903, it will be recalled also, the Pirates themselves won three of the first four games in the world series with the Boston Americans, but the Red Sox jumped in and won the next four games in a row.

SO it doesn't necessarily follow that a club is a certain loser because it has lost the first two games. There's still a chance for the Pirates. They came from behind in many pennant jams during the regular season, and fought their way to the front again when it looked as if they were on the point of being eliminated. As for playing away from home in the next three games, that should occasion no worries either, for it will be remembered that the Bucs did their best work on the road during the 1927 race and finally won the pennant while playing away from home in the the last week of the season by winning five of their first six games on the final trips to Chicago and Cincinnati.

So keep up hope and keep on rooting. A fighting team like the Pittsburgh club is never licked until it is counted out. Don't forget that

M'TIGUE'S TITLE AT STAKE

By MURRAY LEWIN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Bold Michael McTigue, the rejuvenated Irishman, will defend his light heavyweight crown tonight when he squares off against Tommy Loughran, foremost Quaker City challenger, in a scheduled 15-round rumpus in the garden.

Though Michael received the bauble as a present from the honorable boxing commission without so much as sticking up his dukes, when Jack Delaney relinquished the title to play with the bigger and more important boys, the veteran will be compelled to make good use of his mauling to retain his position.

Intersectional Tilts Carded for East

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP.)—Five intersectional clashes, headed by Purdue's invasion of the Harvard Stadium, will feature Eastern gridirons tomorrow.

Harvard's players are in excellent shape. Purdue is handicapped by an injury to Wilcox, star back.

Yale has been developing new plays for use against Georgia.

Navy has concentrated on improving a defense against the forward pass in drilling for the Drake game tomorrow.

Army has practiced defense against Marquette, having confidence in its star backs, Wilson, Cagle and Murrell.

Holy Cross plans to use the forward pass attack against Dayton.

THROUGH the SPORT LENS by HAVEY BOYLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—In the first game of the world series the Pirates gave a demonstration of bad fielding which helped lose that game. In the second game they gave a demonstration of poor hitting, which, coupled with Aldridge's collapse, lost that game. But Pirates are so consistent that they stand a chance to turn completely around and further puzzle everyone by a brand of baseball that will make the Yankees look quite bad.

Havey Boyle.

Pittsburghers who have followed the Pirates all season know the Pirates' capacity for in and out baseball. They know, too, that bad as they appeared at times they managed in the real clutches to find themselves. With this in mind it would be foolish to count the Corsairs out, no matter how hopeless their case seemed after the first two games with the Yankees. It is a team that defies accurate analysis. They are just as liable to lose the series in the games here as they are liable to trim the Yanks badly and go back home to clinch the series.

This is not quite the same team that launched a counter attack from an almost hopeless position to beat the Senators in 1925, but there is a remnant of the old guard left which still holds vast possibilities.

WHILE the dope that the Yankees will be the winners held up in the first two games, there were surprises, too. Those who saw the great Ruth in the last world series—against St. Louis—and who know what great talent he has for home runs, felt certain he would lift one or two in the right field stands in Pittsburgh. There was also the impression that from among Kremer, Aldridge, Hoyt and Wiley Moore there would be obtained some pretty high class pitching. But Ruth failed to connect in expected fashion, and the pitching quartet cited bowed to Miljus and the Pipgras, hurlers not popularly counted upon as invincible.

THE Pirates on the train last night were a little moody. They were not giving up the ship, but disappointment was registered that they were not invading New York at least on even terms with the Yanks. The Yankees were, of course, jubilant as they prepared for departure from Pittsburgh. The Yanks will do well to remember that their road may still prove rough. Those Pirates have no nerves. In the first two games they were not nervous. They were ineffective, but they looked as they have looked at various times during the season. Once, given a start and they may sweep the Yanks aside.

VIC ALDRIDGE complains a little about the umpiring. In fact, after he was forced out of the game in the eighth inning yesterday he directed a caustic remark or two at Umpire Nallin who had, Vic thought, missed a perfect strike on Combs in the third inning. Coombs subsequently got a hit and started a rally which put the Yankees out in front to stay there. Aldridge in the early part of the game had a dandy curve breaking, but its quality diminished as the game wore on. At last its brilliant light flickered and in the eighth just died out. Thus does one ball have a heavy bearing on the series.

WHETHER Aldridge is right, there is not a question but that he believes the strike which Nallin missed in the third was to blame for his ineptness in the eighth. But how could a missed strike in the third bother Aldridge five innings later? You must know pitchers to understand this. The missed strike in the third caused Aldridge to work so hard in that inning that when the eighth inning trouble came along Vic had nothing in reserve. Umpires will laugh at this. Pitchers will agree with Vic. Fans will speculate.

TWO more victories for the Yankees means that the series will come to a close Saturday night. Such an eventuality will be a very bad break for the magnates. Such an ending will deprive the magnates of the very choicest plum imaginable in the finances of baseball. If the Pirates win one game this will not happen, as the series then would be extended to the most ideal situation possible—a Sunday world series game in the largest baseball city of America and in a city where so many thousands put off a lot of their baseball amusement until Sunday afternoon comes around. If Santa Claus should ask a magnate what he most would like the magnate would say: "Give me a Sunday date in a New York world series." There is nothing more profitable.

PERFORMERS on the Yankees this observer likes especially are: Bengough, Gehrig and Koenig. Bengough, a catcher, has loads of pepper and seems highly intelligent in the way he handles his pitcher. This is just a guess, but it is possible that Pipgras was so good because Bengough was so capable. Gehrig is splendid afield and at bat. Also, his spirit is excellent. A sort of rival to Ruth, Gehrig was the loudest exhorter for the Babe to crash a homer with the bases loaded in the eighth yesterday. The game then was won, so Gehrig was not selfish in this. He just wanted to see the great Babe smack one. Koenig, a boy who has had much trouble around short, is doing splendidly in this series, and performing nicely on the offense. Also, he ran over to shake hands with Joe Dugan after Joe had made a dandy catch. These incidents may not be indexes to personalities, but there was something about them that made Gehrig, Koenig and Bengough stand out.

YANKEES' HURLER GAME STAR

By DAMON RUNYON,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—That strange human traffic of organized baseball in which men are bartered and sold in the marts of the game like cows, or pigs, or horses, kept George Pipgras, a tall, sinewy Iowan, moving around the baseball land across several seasons.

A chattel of the modern day slave traders of sport, a pitching pawn of the New York Yankees, the big Mid-Westerner was shunted about the backwoods of the pastime at the whim of his owners for four or five years.

But yesterday afternoon George Pipgras came into his big league own, when he held the sluggers of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the hollow of his greasy old glove, a beloved relic of Atlanta, and St. Paul, and the other towns of his baseball service.

Speed he fed 'em, and then more speed—blinding speed that stopped the champions of the National League with seven hits, no two of which were made in any one inning, while the Yankees were taking the second game of the world's series of 1927 by a score of 6 to 2, giving the American Leaguers a two-game lead over the Pirates.

The ball would leave Pipgras' huge right hand no bigger than a golf ball, so it seemed to the 41,000 google-eyed spectators packed in the stands and bleachers, and would keep getting smaller as it traveled until it dwindled down to a mere white speck evaporating like a snowflake in Benny Bengough's clutching mitt.

The Pirates got a one-run jump on him in the first inning yesterday, but after that they were helpless before the sizzling speed that fairly raised the fuzz on the bosoms of their white shirts as the baseball zipped past them.

Vic Aldridge, a chunky built, hammered down sort of a man, who was quite a fellow in the Pittsburgh-Washington world's series of 1925, was on the mound for the Pirates yesterday, but finally his overhand delivery got to drifting around aimlessly, and Donie Bush took him out of there. Mike Cvengros, a name you pronounce with a sneeze, and Joe Dawson, finished it up.

field. They came up out of the dugout at 11:50 and immediately engaged in batting practice. At this time the bleachers were almost filled.

Babe Ruth, to the delight of the cheering mob in the rightfield bleachers, again was smacking balls into their midst. The Bambino put four into the crowd in six tries, with Don Miller, a rookie from the University of Michigan, serving them up from the box. The Yankee regulars, Lou Gehrig, Meusel, Lazzeri and the others took their turn at bat while Yankee pitchers and substitutes shagged the balls in the outfield.

The Pirates, clad in their traveling suits of gray, black caps, and black, red and white striped stockings, filed in at 12:20. The fans gave them a heart-warming welcome fully as enthusiastic as they got from home fans on the opening day of the series in Pittsburgh.

Ten minutes later the Yankees left the field and the Pirates came out for batting practice. Emil Yde, a southpaw, served balls across the plate to the Pittsburgh batters, indicating the visitors expected the Yanks to start a left-hander in the box.

The 400 newspaper men had a bird's eye view of the playing field from the mezzanine section in back of home plate in contrast to "dugout" views they had in Pittsburgh.

The musicians, grouped in a corner near the left field foul line, were kept busy ducking line drives. The crowd thought it funny when one of them was hit with a fast grounder.

At 1:10 the Yankees took the field for fielding practice. They were in buoyant spirits and showed plenty of snap and dash. The crowd cheered numerous good stops and throws.

How They Scored

YANKEES.

THIRD INNING—Combs opened up with a single to right. Koenig drove a single over second and when Lloyd Waner let it slip past him, Combs scored and Koenig went to third. Koenig scored on Ruth's sacrifice fly to center. Gehrig doubled and went to third on Meusel's infield single. Gehrig scored on Lazzeri's sacrifice fly to right. Three runs.

EIGHTH—Meusel singled. Lazzeri singled sending Meusel to third. Meusel scored on a wild pitch, Lazzeri going to second. Dugan bunted and was safe at first on a fielder's choice, but Lazzeri was retired at third by Gooch's throw to Traynor. Bengough walked. Pipgras walked, filling the bases. Cvengros relieved Aldridge at that point and hit Combs with a pitched ball, forcing Dugan across the plate. Koenig singled, scoring Bengough. Three runs.

PIRATES.

FIRST INNING—Lloyd Waner tripled to left and scored on Barnhart's sacrifice fly to Ruth. One run.

EIGHTH INNING—Lloyd Waner walked. He went to third on Barnhart's single and scored on Paul Waner's sacrifice fly. One run.

A TOUGH START—By RIPLEY

HARRIS EXPECTS BUCCOS TO GET INTO STRIDE

By Joe Harris

Pirate First Baseman, Former American League Star and Hero of Senators in 1925 World Series.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Pirates have no alibis to offer for the second defeat. We were beaten fairly and squarely. But don't get the idea, folks, that the old Bucs are out of it—not for a minute.

Two years ago, if you will recall, the Pirates had their backs to the wall in Washington. They had only one success to show in four battles, and they had to win on hostile territory to stay in the series. It is a matter of baseball history that they swung into action like real champions, winning three games in a row under conditions that called for a combination of skill and courage.

It would not surprise me a bit if we were to swing into a batting stride in the third game which is to be staged at the Yankee Stadium. And I look for effective pitching. Our flingers have shown that they can stop Babe Ruth and Gehrig from hitting homers; neither of these sluggers has been able to hit for the circuit and our pitchers have not given any intentional passes. So that is something.

Just as soon as we co-operate our normal attack with the kind of pitching that served us as we came down the National League stretch, we should start to win. John Miljus is the best-looking hurler so far in the series.

George Pipgras, who flagged us down in the second game, pitched a smart, skillful game. I don't think he threw over three hooks all afternoon, but his fast ball was under perfect control. I know he did not serve me or George Grantham a hook and I did not hear any of the boys saying they looked at any.

PIPGRAS GOOD

Pipgras kept his fast ball high on some of our batters. This pitcher was extra good on account of the white shirts in the center field bleachers. I

KENTUCKY JOCKEY CLUB PLANS NEW RACE TRACK

WELCH AND RUDY TO BOX AGAIN

A change has been made in the preliminary card for the second boxing show of the season at Motor Square Garden Monday night. Matchmaker Johnny Ray was unable to dig up an opponent for Patsy Gallagher, the South Side featherweight, so he has rematched Teddy Welch of McKeesport and Young Rudy of Charleroi for his second battle and moved up the Sam Hunter-Kid Crutchfield Negro heavyweight battle to the opening number.

Rudy and Welch recently met at Duquesne, Pa., and again at Duquesne Garden. Both bouts were hummers and, if they repeat their heated action, the clash may be the best on Monday's card.

All of the bouts Monday will be over the eight-round route. Cuddy DeMarco mets Billy Wallace of Cleveland in the windup and Rudy Cedar, Tarentum welterweight, and Harry Harris of Niles, O., box the semi-final.

DeMarco hopes to wipe out the memory of his two-round knockout defeat by Wallace in Cleveland during last season.

Tonight's meeting between Tommy Loughran and Mike McTigue for the light-heavyweight title will be their fourth battle. Loughran claims he won all of the first three.

Johnny Indresano of Boston, who recently defeated Welterweight Champion Joe Dundee in Boston, boxes Tommy Freeman of Erie and Hot Springs at Boston tonight.

Eddie Dyer of Toledo and Bucky Lawless of Auburn, N. Y., meet in the windup at Erie tonight.

M'GRAW WINS ON FOUL IN BOUT WITH TERRIS

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Just who is the logical contender for the lightweight crown guarded by Sammy Mandell continues to remain in doubt. In a return engagement here last night, Phil McGraw, of Detroit, turned the tables on Sid Terris, his former conqueror, by winning on a foul in the second round.

Terris, however, had punished the Detroit battler unmercifully up to the time he was disqualified on a foul. McGraw just lasted out the first round and was reeling groggily in the succeeding stanza when Terris delivered a low blow which sent McGraw writhing in pain to the canvas.

GENEVA PLAYS DUKES HERE TODAY

By JESS CARVER.

FOR the reason that there are only two things certain in this world, death and taxes, and because the quality that got Mr. Gunga Din, the famous water boy, a writeup in Mr. Kipling's column, has been instilled into the beings of the football warriors of Duquesne University, Geneva College cannot be considered installed four touchdown favorites over the Dubious Dukes today.

The two elevens meet up on the Bluff today at 2:30 p. m., in what may be termed the first feature gridiron offering of collegiate nature of the year. It is a Tri-State Conference affair, between traditional rivals. Geneva, last year's champs, has nothing to gain and everything to lose. Duquesne is in exactly the opposite position. You can figure from that the sort of a ball game you'll see today.

Basing a prediction on the outcome of the game on the relative merits of the two elevens so far this year and last, Geneva should win.

Geneva has a veteran team, for the most part. The line weighs close to 190 pounds, a formidable weapon for any team. The backs, three of which have played their two years of college football, are fast, tricky and threatening. The team has an open offensive, a well laid forward passing attack and sturdy defensive powers.

RECORD BATTLES

Its record for the season so far includes a 21 to 0 win over Davis-Elkins and a scoreless tie played with Bucknells. Last fall, practically the same team defeated Harvard, held Cornell, beat Duquesne 34 to 0, walloped Waynesburg and downed Thiel and Allegheny. Grove City was the only eleven able to upset the Covenanters in 1926.

Duquesne, with a light, green line, a half way inexperienced set of backs and a new system and new TEX MAY MATCH JACK IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Unless Jack Dempsey changes his mind again, he will be seen in action at the Garden this winter. Though neither the former heavyweight champion nor Tex Rickard would admit as much after a lengthy pow-wow in the Garden this afternoon, it is said that Jack has assured the promoter he will be ready by the latter part of December to hook up with anyone Tex figures to be a good playmate for him.

Rickard declared that all was well between him and the Manassa Big Boy and that he expected to spring some sort of an announcement in a few weeks. At the present time, he added, he was not in the position to divulge his plans.

Dempsey said he intended to leave tomorrow night for California. He declared he would make a brief stay at Salt Lake City to visit his mother, after which he would go to Los Angeles to straighten out some business matters.

The things all wanted – and at a price for all

The outright issue of what buyers want decides all car success today. On that basis, for the first nine months Essex has outsold any other "Six" at or near its price, almost two to one. It reflects overwhelming preference for the things Essex gives:

Super-Six Smoothness and Dash—High-compression Power and Performance—Size and Roominess without Unwieldiness—Steady Riding without useless Weight. 50 miles an hour all day long—and far greater speed when wanted—Riding Ease Like Gliding. Economy of Price, Operation and Maintenance.

Essex has made it vividly clear that compromise short of 6-cylinder luxury is not economy; and that greater price can buy no higher degree of mechanical fineness.

Its Super-Six motor develops more than 2½ times the power its size ordinarily rates it. It converts waste heat to power and gives the brilliant efficiency of high-compression performance, with an economy of fuel that is astounding.

With flashing pick-up and positive brake action you drive fast with safety in traffic. And with the physical restfulness of its smooth, vibrationless performance, you have also the mental ease of perfect braking safety, and instant, easy steering control.

In five beautiful and colorful bodies, handsomely finished and appointed, it meets every requirement of utility, convenience, fine appearance and pride of ownership.

BARNEY DREYFUSS ASKS FANS TO GIVE BUSH A SQUARE DEAL

New Song—"Come Back to Me"—By the Hotel Keepers

Pine Village Back on Map

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 7.—(INS.)—Pine Village—a small town of 650 people—today prepared to stage a "comeback" in the football world. Claire Rhode, manager of the team of 1912-14, which was not scored against and never lost a game in 131 contests of professional football, has taken the helm again.

Backs Donie Against Ki

By TOM BIRKS.

STATING that a major league club only can have one manager, and that that manager must have absolute say in all matters, and that players on a ball club not wishing to follow out the ideas of that manager must take the consequences, President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh National League ball club dwelt considerably on the case as the highlight of his speech at the Pittsburgh Umpires' Association annual banquet at the Roosevelt Hotel last night.

Chairman Eddie McCann, in introducing the Pirate owner, remarked that possibly something would be spilled, but it was soon evident that while Dreyfuss stated that he did not see the second game of the series, some of the incidents in the course of the game had been brought to his attention. Right from the beginning of his remarks he went into the Cuyler case, and said that someone must have the final say and the final say cost Hazen Cuyler $50.

He also added that in the course of his 28 years connection with the ownership of the Louisville and Pittsburgh ball clubs, it had never been his principle to keep the fines, but usually returned them before the close of the season.

APPEALS FOR SUPPORT

In appealing to the baseball element in the district to support the work of Donie Bush and the Pittsburgh players, Dreyfuss admitted he did not know of the fining of Cuyler until Pittsburgh newspapers carried the story two days later. Backing up Manager Bush in his decision, Dreyfuss stated that while Bish ate, talked and loved baseball his tough grind to bring to Pittsburgh another pennant had not received from the baseball public the support that it deserved.

He added that the club led by Donie Bush will yet, in spite of obstacles, win another world series for Pittsburgh. Dreyfuss, before leaving for New York, and that, despite the fact that the fans thought otherwise, the thought of having to stage the seventh and deciding game of the series brought anything but joy to the minds of the officials and that the Pittsburgh club was going to finish the series in six games by winning the next four.

Coming back to the umpires before leaving, the Pirate owner stated that he had a warm spot in his heart for the indicator handlers and that some day he would give them a banquet.

His speech was the highlight of the banquet. Danny Winters, president of City Council, spoke on the work of Council providing playgrounds.

Councilman James Malone was introduced by Eddie McCann and also Past President Calvin Bolster. Malone dwelt on the work of the Umpires' Association, but referring to Dreyfuss' appeal for the co-operation and loyalty of the fans asked the co-operation of the National League magnate to have Pittsburgh represented on the roster of the National League's umpires' list, and named "Bull" Brown, local umpire, now on the Pacific coast, as fully capable of calling them in the big show.

The association, following a motion by Dan Dougherty, sent to Manager Donie Bush and the Pittsburgh club a telegram wishing the club success and hoping the world's championship will again rest in Pittsburgh.

One-Eyed Connelly was introduced to the boys by the toastmaster. And looking at the Pittsburgh owner, the world famous globe trotter stated that Forbes Field was not hard to crash.

Rosy Roswell, President Barney Givens, Heine Blum and Calvin Bolster also spoke. Telegrams from Umpires Bull Brown, Jack Reardon, Pete McLoughlin of the National League staff were read.

esult, have been easily upset. Unless they overcome that feeling they aven't a chance, but I think they ill get over it."

THAT is the way I feel about it. I have not been impressed with the Pirates' playing in the series. t has been too conservative, too autious, too nervous. The breaks ave come together and for the other eam, one causing loss of steadiness hat has paved the way for others. If he club can get both feet on the round and force some breaks its own ay, it still has a chance.

The Yankees' outlook is mighty osy, it must be admitted. But ultiate victory for Huggins' men is far om assured. Back in 1921 in a best ut of nine games series, the Yankees won the first two games from the iants, only to have the series tied p at two each, after which the ankees again took the lead with a ictory. The Giants came on then nd won the next three games to cop.

ALDRIDGE pitched well until he collapsed in the seventh inning yesterday, but, even if he had been airtight, he would have had a battle beating Pipgras, whose work bordered on the sensational.

An odd feature of the game was the scarcity of assists. Each side made only five. Neither Traynor at third nor Wright at shortstop had an assist for the Pirates, and Joe Dugan, the Yankee third baseman, also did not have an assist. The starting pitchers, Pipgras and Aldridge, had two each, and the second basemen had two each. The others were one each for Koenig, the New York shortstop, and Gooch, the Pirate catcher. The small total of five for each club equaled the world series record set by the Yankees six years ago, and tells the story of how the batters on both teams were lining the ball hard at the infielders for putouts or sending them far into the outfield.

PENNOCK is a bad baby for the Pirates to get past today, and they will have to get past him to face the hapless situation of being forced to win four games in a row to take the series. It is not a pleasing prospect, and one that calls for everything the Pirates have in the emergency. The crucial hour is at hand for the Bucs. They will make or break themselves in today's game.

CLOUDY SKIES GREET BUCS AND YANKS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(U.P.)—Overcast skies and a slightly cool temperature greeted members of the New York Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates when they arrived here today for the third game of the world series. The forecast for New York is for partly cloudy skies today, but the weather bureau reported there was little prospect of rain before night.

SPORT COMMENT

they counted nine or fourteen or something over Gene Tunney.

THE main trouble with the Pirates appears to be that they are in a batting slump. They hit well enough on Wednesday, all things considered, and gave promise of even better things later in the series.

Yesterday, however, they were in a rut and their batting showing was far below their normal mark. Of course, this fact was due largely to the fact that they were up against an exceptionally good young pitcher in the person of George Pipgras, who must be given credit for having hurled a splendid game of ball, but even when allowance is made for that, it is clear that the Bucs are not in their natural batting stride.

It would be just like one of the many queer turns of baseball if they should succeed in finding their batting eyes on strange grounds in New York after being unable to get going at their own park.

DID you ever hear of a pitcher being so good that he lost his own game on account of his own surpassing form? Well, that appears to have been the fate of Vic Aldridge at Forbes Field yesterday.

Aldridge's great curve ball was breaking in such remarkable style over the corners of the plate that he was not only baffling the Yankee hitters in their attempts to judge or connect with it, but was fooling Umpire Nallin as well.

On numerous occasions when it looked as if one of Aldridge's pitches was going to sweep straight through outside, his curve broke beautifully right over the corner of the plate.

Not only was the Yankee batter fooled in such a case, but Umpire Nallin also took it for granted the pitch was going toward the point he originally expected and called it a ball instead of a strike. If Aldridge lost one strike that way during the afternoon he lost a dozen. Pipgras also lost several, it must be admitted in fairness.

THE worst and most costly blunder of this kind on Nallin's part came in the third inning, when Aldridge had Combs, the first batter clearly struck out. But Nallin missed the curve, called the strike a ball, and then Combs began a three-run rally with a single to right.

If Combs had not been on first, Grantham would not have been required to play in such a position as to enable him to cover first base on a possible bunt, and in that case he could have fielded the single which Koenig sent over second, and which Lloyd Waner fumbled with disastrous results.

But for Nallin's mistake the Yanks might not have scored at all in that inning, but instead they got a cluster of three runs that took the lead away from the Pirates and enabled them to play a different style of game than they might have employed if they had been still in the rear.

ALIBIS are distasteful, but it cannot be denied that the Pirates have been by far the greater sufferers from mistakes by the umpires in the series in the two games. Quigley also showed poor judgment on several occasions in the opener.

It goes to prove that the Sun-Telegraph's recent contention that the best umpires should be appointed for the world series has much to support it.

The present system is to appoint the world series umpires in turn from year to year. Each umpire gets extra pay in the sum of $2,500 for working in the world series, and it has been contended by the league heads that it would be unfair to give some of the arbiters more turns than the others.

POPPYCOCK! The world series is an important contest between the best two teams in the two major leagues, and if the teams are the best, why should not the best umpires be selected also.

If the leagues want to give the other umpires some of the financial spoils, why not appoint the best umpires to do the work in the series and reward the other members of the staff with shares out of the leagues' own share of the money. They get plenty of it.

It is a sorry situation to see incompetent umpires handling such important events as the world series games, while capable men are left out "until their turns" come. The best should work in every series, regardless of turns.

In the National League, President Heydler had no fewer than four better men available than Quigley and Moran. These are Klem, the best umpire in the country behind the plate; Reardon, Jorda and Pfirman. But they are left on the outside while incompetent men spoil important ball games.

THE selection of Lee Meadows and Herb Pennock as the pitchers for the third game of the series at Yankee Stadium today means a rather odd pairing, as Pennock has never lost a world series game and Meadows has never won one.

Pennock won two world series games for the Yanks against the Giants in 1923, and two for the Yanks against the Cardinals last year. The record of world series victories without a defeat is five, established by Jack Combs of the old Athletics, and Herb will equal it if he wins his game today.

Meadows pitched in only one world series game and lost it. That was the first game of the Pittsburgh-Washington series on October 7, 1925, at Forbes Field. Lee did not even finish the game. Then he developed a sore arm and did not pitch again in the series.

don't wish to let this stand as an alibi, but I don't know when I ever swung at the plate under such a handicap. At one time during the afternoon I was struck in the chest with a ball, the white sphere coming out of the white background. But as I said, I do not want to detract from the clever pitching of Pipgras. Moreover, the Yanks had to hit his out of the same bad background, and I know none of them liked it.

Aldridge had a good curve ball, but he was a bit unfortunate in the third round.

The Pirates were no gloomy bunch in the club house after the game. We all realize that we must grab a game soon, but this we intended to do. The Pirates are a much better club than they have shown in the past two days.

MUDHENS WIN LITTLE SERIES

TOLEDO, Oct. 7.—Toledo won the minor league championship of the baseball world here yesterday when they defeated Buffalo of the International League, 4 to 0. Toledo, American Association champions, won five out of the six games in the series and completely outclassed Buffalo. Palmero won his second game of the series today.

coach, figures to make it a moral victory by holding Geneva to 24 points. That is the honest opinion of most critics.

Elmer Layden, ex-Four Horseman, famed in song and story and one of the greatest backfield men of all time, may turn out today to be a wonder coach. I've watched his Dukes drill and they look smart. They look as smart as Geneva. They seem fast, they have several well worked plays and one or two stars that certainly are destined to shine with individual brilliancy before the season is out.

DUKES ARE FAST

Best of all, the team has fight—fight in abundance. Layden will send it out on the field this afternoon keyed high, pitched to the extent that the men will go down fighting, even though the score be 200 to 0.

While the Dukes and Geneva are battling on the Bluff, Pitt and Tech will be finishing up work for their games on the morrow.

The Panthers face West Virginia in the annual fracas in the Stadium and Tech gets Drexel U. in the Tartan Bowl. Pitt has its work cut out for it, while Tech doesn't look to have anything very hard in the Philadelphia eleven.

Both out of town teams will arrive in town sometime today, in time to stage workouts on the respective fields.

WESTINGHOUSE, SCHENLEY PLAY

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

The outcome of this afternoon's grid battle between Schenley and Westinghouse High School on the former's field may indicate the winner of Section 1 of the City League and possibly the city champions for this year. Both teams are primed and eager for the fray.

Coach Walter Gross has been working his men at a furious pace for the last couple of weeks in anticipation of this first big early season tilt. And Mentor Burton has been none the less diligent in his efforts to bring his team around to top shape for today's setto. Schenley smothered South in its opener last week, while Westinghouse walloped Swissvale.

In other games South Hills meets Allegheny; Oliver clashes with Carrick, South couples with Peabody, Perry and Langley play, Avalon goes to Crafton, Bridgeville meets Dormont, Braddock invades McKees Rocks, and North Braddock visits Shady Side Academy. Ben Avon plays at Dormont.

ALLEGHENY GRIDDERS LEAVE FOR HANOVER

MEADVILLE, Pa., Oct. 6.—The Allegheny College football squad left yesterday afternoon for Hanover, N. H., where the Big Green team of Dartmouth will be met on the gridiron tomorrow.

Practice will start at 1:30 p. m., and be terminated at 3 o'clock. The defensive work of the local team against the forward pass will be again stressed in today's workout.

BAD DECISION ON PITCH HURT CHANCES--VIC

By Vic Aldridge

"The Hoosier Schoolmaster."

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Well, folks, we were beaten again yesterday. Perhaps we would have been licked by a close score anyhow, but there is nobody who can tell me that Johnny Gooch and myself did not have Earl Combs fanned at the beginning of the third inning.

Almost any player in the game yesterday knows I was using my curve a lot, and with two balls and two strikes on Combs in the third I broke over a hook that should have sent Earl back to the bench. The curve broke over the plate, but it was called a ball and then I had to come right down the alley with a pitch. Combs singled.

George Grantham and the rest of us figured that Koenig might bunt. Naturally George moved a bit closer to first and Koenig drove a bounder which would have been quite easy for Grantham had there been nobody on first—and I still think that Combs should not have been on first. As the humorous fellow said, "that's my story and I am going to stick to it." But there was no humor in the situation for the Pirates when the third round was over.

HAD COMBS OUT

Instead of Ruth facing us in the third with two out and nobody on, Babe came up with a runner on third, none out, and one already over the plate. Now I am not saying positively that we would have kept Koenig off base, but I do know that we had Combs fanned; at least, that is my conviction.

It is quite natural then for somebody to suggest that I weakened in the eighth. Well, that is exactly what happened, but if I had not had to work so long in that awful third, I would have had more reserve in the eighth. There is no use denying that I was upset over the Combs incident for it did unsettle me.

One miscalled pitch in a clinch has a lot to do with many ball games, as every pitcher and every player realizes. As I said before, the Yankees are a great team and it may be that we would have been trimmed, but there would have been a much different complexion to that battle had Combs been called out.

He that is it may, I want to pay my compliments to George Pipgras, who turned our attack back. George is a big, strapping fellow with a good fast ball that is under his control at all times. He threw very few curves, but he was keeping his "swifter" in places where our boys could not get hold of it.

We are still very much in the series, and every man on the team will be hustling for a victory in the Yankee Stadium today.

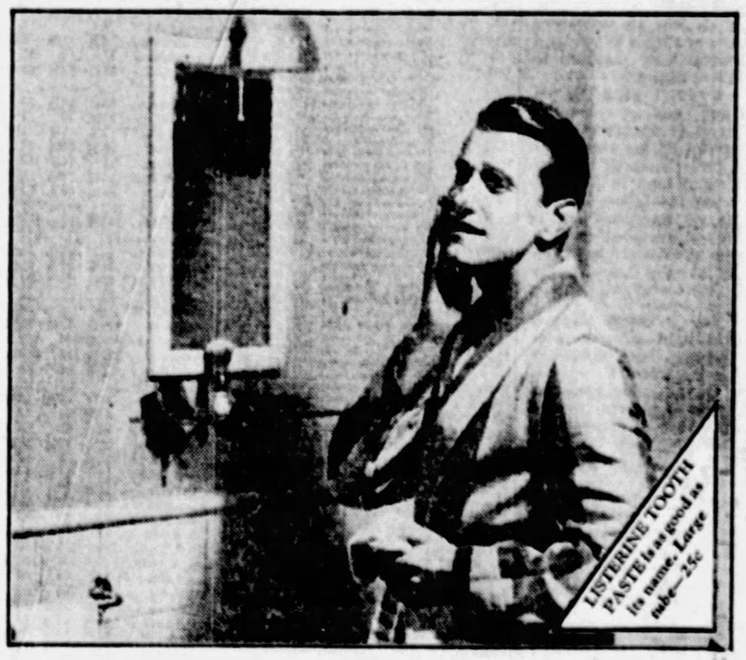
How Cool!



After Shaving

It won't cost much to take this dare, and you may profit by it.

To night or tomorrow morning, after you shave, douse Listerine full strength on your face. Notice how much better your skin feels. Alive! Refreshed! All the smarting gone—and in its place a delightful feeling of coolness that lingers.

Listerine first stimulates the skin, then soothes it. The antiseptic essential oils contained in it quickly heal tiny cuts and scratches left by the razor, and at the same time lessen the danger of infection.

Try Listerine this way once or twice and we'll wager you'll be so delighted you'll want to use it more often.

By the way, have you written for our free book of etiquette? It covers points men are always uncertain about. Address Lambert Pharmacal Company, Dept. K-7, 2101 Locust Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Forbes

Why Workers Honor Hearst; Forbes Reveals a Secret.

By B. C. FORBES

BY whom would you like to be honored?

If a worker, you probably would like best to be singled out for special recognition by your employer. If an employer, wouldn't you rather be respected and honored by your work people than by anybody else?

This column has been urging employers to honor and reward workers rendering meritorious services.

Now comes an instance of wage earners honoring an employer.

THIS interesting, significant happening is thus described in a dispatch from Los Angeles:

"Chosen to succeed the late Lord Northcliffe as an honorary member of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, the document that formally certified his enrollment was presented today to William Randolph Hearst.

"Heading the delegation that welcomed Mr. Hearst as a brother pressman was Maj. George Berry, president of the organization. The delegates included high officials of the American Federation of Labor, commissioners of industry from several states and other distinguished labor leaders.

"Maj. Berry told 'Brother' Hearst:

"'The union is proud to number you among its members as a man whose achievements have been notable along many lines and whose recognition of the dignity of labor has always been sincere and spontaneous.'"

NUMBERS of American business and financial leaders are honored by receiving degrees from universities, by being banqueted by societies and associations composed of men in their own class, by being elected heads of employers' organizations, etc. But surely much more to be prized is a sincere, conspicuous tribute from the wage earners in a man's own enterprise or in his own line of industry.

I recently heard Dwight W. Morrow, our new ambassador to Mexico, talk most earnestly and impressively on this theme: "After the Lord had made the Ten Commandments he laid down another, perhaps as valuable as all the others put together, namely, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'" Having been a neighbor of Mr. Morrow for many years, I can testify, incidentally, that he has handsomely lived up to that injunction, an injunction which takes on a special significance in view of the post he is about to fill.

NOW, who could be more essentially a man's "neighbors" than his own employes, those who work with him and for him, those whose well-being is governed by his generosity or niggardliness, his fairness or unfairness? Is there anything outside of a worker's family more important to him than his job, his employer? Don't they mean more to him than any individual who happens to come and live nearby?

Always before I write the life story of any man of affairs, I make a point of finding out how he is regarded by his own workfolks. If he is hated by them or does not stand high in their esteem, I leave the fellow severely alone. To my mind, no man is entitled to be regarded as successful who has raised himself up mercilessly at the cost of the good will of his workers.

MAY I tell a secret, since it throws light on why these working printers have taken joy in honoring Mr. Hearst?

During all the many years my writings have appeared in the Hearst and other papers Mr. Hearst has never once asked me to modify my views on any subject under the sun. But I did once get a ringing letter from him when someone led him to believe that I had written a column advocating the reduction of wages. (The fact was I had forecast very definitely that wages in a certain industry would inevitably be reduced—which they subsequently were.) Mr. Hearst wrote something like this:

"One of my most cherished principles is the payment of high wages. I will never allow any of my newspapers to be used by any writer to advocate the lowering of wages. America has been made great, not by paying the lowest possible wages, but by paying the highest possible wages."

And he has always practised this principle.

ANY employer who does not make it his business to strive conscientiously to earn the good will of his own work-folks is missing out in life.

BEAR ACTIVITY DEPRESSES MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Extensive readjustment of speculative accounts imparted considerable irregularity to the price movement in today's stock market. Banks called about $10,000,000 in loans, but call money was in rather plentiful supply at 4 per cent.

The day's financial and business news had a bearish tinge. The big increase in federal brokers' loans, the falling off in September steel production, compared with the same month last year, and the drop in August railroad earnings, all had a depressive influence. A bullish interpretation was placed, however, on the completion of arrangements for the sale of a stock exchange membership at the record-breaking price of $250,000, and on indications of a continuation of easy money rates.

Renewed weakness of the oil shares was accompanied by rumors of unfavorable dividend developments, while U. S. Rubber was heavy on reports of a sharp drop in earnings in the first nine months of the year. U. S. Steel common sank 2 points below last night's close, and Phillips Petroleum, Mid-Continent, Barnsdall B, Westinghouse Airbrake (new) and Remington Rand, all touched new 1927 lows.

The closing was steady. American Telephone sold at 187½, the highest in 25 years and American Power and Light, Freeport Texas, United Drug and Columbia Carbon touched new 1927 peaks when prices rallied on buying of public utilities and various specialties in the final hours. Total sales approximated 2,000,000 shares.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—With snow falling in Canada and some frost reported in the corn belt, grain values today showed an early upward trend. Increased selling developed, however, and grains failed to hold well, houses with connections northwest offering wheat rather freely. Opening at ⅛c off to ⅛c up, wheat later kept near to initial figures. Corn started unchanged to ⅛c higher and continued to average above yesterday's finish. Oats were steady. Provisions tended to advance.

Heavy receipts of wheat at Minneapolis, Duluth and Winnipeg, far in excess of the totals a year ago, did much today to offset the market influence of unfavorable weather in Canada. It was contended by bears that whenever the weather permits enough Canadian wheat is available to bring about a record movement likely to affect prices the world over.

Advices today of frost in parts of Iowa and predictions of frost in other states tonight failed to stir up any great amount of buying of corn future deliveries. Most traders were inclined to regard frosts at this time as a matter of course. No mention of damage by the frosts was made in reports at hand early.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

LONE STAR SELLS OFF IN LATE TRADING

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Bond prices continued to improve gradually in today's bond market, with a fair volume of trading well scattered over the list. A few railroad issues were active, close to yesterday's closing levels, and slightly under their peak for the year. Missouri Pacific 5s were freely absorbed above 101 and Illinois Central (Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans) 4½s sold at their previous high.

Public Utilities were somewhat less active than in recent sessions, Standard Oil of New York 4½s were offered in heavy amounts, but held close to previous final figures.

Price changes in the foreign group were narrow, and in the main, upward. United States government issues displayed a mixed tone.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (00 omitted in sales column. United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Wide fluctuations and heavy dealings marked trading on the curb exchange today, the most important features being advances in a number of specialties extending over an extremely wide range. Deere & Co. had the widest movement, advancing 16 points to the new high record of 206. Ford Motor of Canada continued in demand, advancing 7 points to 572, a new high for the year, and a number of other issues in the same class rose from 5 to 10 points.

Motor stocks as a group were active and strong, following the advance of Ford Motor of Canada. Reo moved up over 2 points to 25 and Marmon gained about 2 points. Stutz reacted after an early advance, but the 7½ per cent bonds made a new high record, advancing over 6 points to 103.

Celanese rose over 2 points, Celluloid advanced 8 points to 110 and Tubize gained 5 points. Johns Manville reacted after making a new high record. Bancitaly was in continued supply, yielding about a point.

Utilities were again strong. Long Island Light, which rose 17 points yesterday to the high record of 172, held close to the level on active trading today. Electric Bond and Shares and American Gas and Electric made fractional gains.

Petroleum stocks were heavy, being unsettled by the further cuts in gasoline and predictions of coming reductions in crude oil prices. Indiana shares, regarded as the key to the Standard Oil stocks, dropped a point, bringing them down to 72.

Mining stocks were in increased demand, with some of the low priced issues, including Engineers, being traded at higher levels.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Following is the official list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column in bond list):

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 23 to 28 points on covering and trade buying, influenced by relatively steady Liverpool cables and reports of rains in the southwest with prospects for lower temperatures.

December sold up to 21.23c and March to 21.37c, but these prices attracted more southern hedge selling, or pre-bureau liquidation, and there were reactions of 14 or 15 points in early trading. Trade interests continued to buy on the setback, however, also considerable covering and the market held fairly steady at the end of the first hour.

Private cables reported reduction, combined with continental and Bombay buying in the Liverpool market on the southwestern rain reports.

The market eased later under renewed liquidation and southern selling in part attributed to uncertainty over the probable showing of tomorrow's Government crop report. A few stop orders were uncovered, carrying December off to 21.02c, or 20 points from the high level of today and within 2 points of yesterday's close. The market was quiet at close to this figure at mid-day, New York Cotton Exchange members on the average expect a crop indication of around 12,633,000 bales today.

INFANT PULLS COVERS OVER HEAD, SMOTHERS

SHARON, Pa., Oct. 7.—While a sister watched, the four-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Buitrago playfully pulled the bedclothes over her face in her home last night and a few minutes later was smothered to death.

OHIO DISTRICT MAKES BOOK AGENT'S LIFE HARD

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Oct. 7.—Things are getting tougher for the book agent. Rural teachers in this district have been ordered to notify the sheriff's office when any such peddlers offer their wares.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Marked increases in orders and shipments, with production about the same, are noted in reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association from 341 softwood lumber mills for the week ended October 1, compared with the previous week, when 17 more mills reported. Substantial increases in production and new business are shown over a year ago. Hardwood mills reported a large increase in new business, and gains in shipments and production over the preceding week. Unfilled orders of 221 Southern Pine and West Coast mills were 580,[illegible] feet, against 602,867,418 feet the week before.

Sugar Stock Placed.

A block of 200,000 shares of common stock of Great Western Sugar Company, part of the holdings of an estate, has been placed privately by a group headed by White, Weld & Co., around the market price, involving payment of more than $8,000,000. The largest individual holder of stock in this company is said to be Horace Havemeyer.

Strip Steel Improves.

Strip steel orders are showing improvement and the appearance of good-sized tonnages of cast iron pipe in the east, encourages producers to believe prices are scraping bottom, says Daily Metal trade. The pig iron market is dull.

Phillips Petroleum Plans Refinery.

Phillips Petroleum Company plans a 10,000 barrel refinery at Borger, in the Texas Panhandle district, marking its entry into the refining business.

United Gas Plans Stock Increase.

Stockholders of United Gas Improvement Company will vote December 7 on a proposed increase in authorized capital stock from 2,130,088 shares to 6,000,000 shares, $50 par, and issuance of 1,830,081 shares in exchange for capital stock of Philadelphia Electric Company on the basis of one share of U. G. I. for two shares of Philadelphia Electric.

Exchange Seat Brings $250,000.

The price of membership on the New York Stock Exchange has reached the $250,000 mark, a sale having been arranged at this new record figure, which is $10,000 more than the transaction announced yesterday.

Jones Tea Buys Stores.

Jones Brothers Tea Company has acquired 54 stores from the Andrew Davey Company in the Hudson River Valley. This increases the Jones chain to about 650 locations.

Steel Volume Disappointing.

Youngstown dispatches say fourth quarter business has failed to materialize in the volume expected by steel manufacturers, who now predict improvement is likely to be delayed until December. The Mahoning Valley is feeling more severely than other districts, the decline in buying of pipe, sheets and bars, because of its large production of these classes of steel.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA R. R. VALUED AT $63,458,485

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(U.S.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission has announced a final valuation of $63,458,485 for property owned and used by the Central of Georgia Railroad, as of June 10, 1915. Property used but not owned was valued at $15,743,087.

SEAT SELLS FOR $240,000

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Stock Exchange seats reached a new high record price with arrangements to sell a membership at $240,000. This is an increase of $5,000 over the last sale. At the same time, it was announced the membership of Gordon B. Todd, expelled by the Exchange last week, had been sold to Allston Flagg, and that of William H. Golvin to Edgar Bernhard for $235,000 each.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

A fairly active market for practically all lines of fruit and vegetables opened today at the local wholesale produce district. All vegetables were sold at about unchanged quotations. The fruit market was fairly active. The price of cantaloupes was lower. The poultry market was easy and supplies were heavy. The demand was fairly good and live heavy hens and springers were somewhat lower. Hog dressed heavy hens were also decreased.

The butter market was firm and the quotations were unchanged. Eggs and cheese were also firm and held the same prices.

Carlot supplies were heavy, a total of 110 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 10 cars of apples, 6 cabbage, 5 cantaloupes, 3 celery, 1 grapefruits, 5 grapes, 4 lemons, 5 lettuce, 6 onions, 7 oranges, 8 peaches, 9 pears, 4 peppers, 29 potatoes, 1 sweet potatoes, 9 prunes, 1 carrots, 3 cauliflower, 1 quinces and 1 beans.

The hay market was firm and the receipts light. The grain market was fairly steady and the receipts also light.

Local Market Quiet, Prices Steady

The price movement was a little sluggish on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, especially so in the earlier stages of the session when the recent leaders were called upon to absorb some profit-taking sales attracted by the recent advances to new high levels for the year.

At the start of business Standard Sanitary was above yesterday's close and at a new top for 1927, but offers of a comparatively few shares clipped off the initial peak and the stock settled back fractionally, only to go forward later when early offerings were absorbed without difficulty.

Lone Star Gas was practically unchanged and displayed very little inclination to get away from the level around 60 at which it sold all day yesterday. This issue also established a new peak earlier in the week and has met the usual profit-taking attendant upon such performances.

In the miscellaneous section the early market failed to develop anything of note. Bids and offers were about on a parity with the closing quotations of Thursday with only mild interest evident on either the buying or selling side.

After mid-day Lone Star Gas experienced a sinking spell and sold down sharply from the opening. Not a great deal of the stock came out, but in view of the unsettled conditions in the oil and gas issues on the New York exchange, it was assumed that Lone Star traders were letting the stock drift until a more distinct picture of the general situation is obtained.

American Window Glass Machine came out again at 25, unchanged from yesterday. This figure represents the lowest price on this stock for many years. Standard Sanitary sagged back again during the afternoon, but did not display any pronounced reactionary tendency.

ANGRY ROSEDALE CITIZENS PLAN BOROUGH

Aroused by what they term discrimination against them in the matter of awarding road improvements, residents of the Rosedale real estate plan in Penn township banded last night and today circulated petitions to have the plan incorporated as the "Borough of Rosedale."

The rebellious action of the Rosedale residents grew out of a meeting last night in the Thaddeus Stevens School, Frankstown road, between them and the township commissioners. Recriminations and threats disrupted the meeting after the commissioners refused definite action on paving a Rosedale road until a survey had been made.

Township Commissioner John C. Burkhard declared today that the majority of the Rosedale representatives approached the commissioners last night in an antagonistic mood and refused to reason. He denied the commissioners had refused the improvement, claiming that action was deferred until after a survey would be completed. That A. B. Moore, one of the original planners of Rosedale, failed to build 44-foot roadways as he promised, was the contention of Burkhard, who alleged that the road under discussion last night was "nothing but an alley."

Antagonism was denied by H. J. Pierce, promoter of the borough movement. Pierce averred that the commissioners have been putting off construction of the road for more than a year, to the general dissatisfaction of Rosedale residents. He admitted there were "hot words" last night, which ultimately resulted in a meeting of Rosedale people and the electing of a committee of three to forward the borough movement.

Those in charge of this movement are Pierce, Thomas Fitzroy and W. T. Noll. With the petition signed and in order, Pierce said, the courts will be petitioned to incorporate the plan.

W. & J. CLUB TO HEAR DR. M'CORMICK SPEAK

The regular meeting of the Pittsburgh Washington and Jefferson Club will be held in the Nixon restaurant Monday noon. Dr. S. B. McCormick will speak.

Blind Veteran Woos, Wins Voice He Loves

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—For Vincenzo D'Amico light had failed in a poison gas attack in the World War. Yesterday a girl he had never seen, Maria Concetta Maiuzdo, brought her youth and liveliness to lighten his way. She led him to the Municipal Building and married him in the little chapel there.

D'Amico is 36 and lives in a furnished room on the East Side. His bride, 24, lived nearby. They could not be found after their wedding, but D'Amico's landlady, Mrs. Sarah Goldstein, told their story.

Six months ago, through his sister, Marie Vincenzo met Miss Maiuzdo. He could not see her, but he could hear her voice. And his sister told him how beautiful she was. The girl's voice made his two-tube radio set, his only amusement until then, seem drab.

Drab or not, D'Amico did not see how he could improve matters. In the daytime he made rugs and that brought him only $12 a week. Until a year ago he had been in Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, government surgeons treating him, while his right to compensation was disputed. But three months ago he was awarded $200 a month, and that changed everything.

He wooed and won the voice he loved and, without telling any friends, they slipped away and wed. D'Amico was born in Italy, but he has set his heart on a home in the Bronx. Mrs. D'Amico will continue her work as a seamstress, and, with her help, the veteran will carry on.

DEATH BATTLE HEALS FEUD BREACH

Joseph Jance, 23, of 316 Harmar street, was held blameless for the death of Frank Rowinski, 23, of the same address, killed in a fist fight September 20, at an inquest held before Chief Deputy Coroner Harry C. Ewing yesterday.

Members of the Rowinski family testified in behalf of Jance, who had been held by the homicide squad. It was brought out that a feud had existed between the families and Rowinski died of a fracture of the vertebrae when he was knocked down by Jance. The boys took up a quarrel which was started by their fathers and in which, it was testified, the father of Jance was stabbed with a poker by the elder Rowinski.

When a verdict of accidental death was returned, members of both families shook hands and held a reunion in the coroner's office.

W. Va. Groundhog Scarce; SOS to Punxsutawney

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 7.—Groundhogs are at a premium in West Virginia.

The School of Medicine, University of West Virginia, needed six for a hiberation experiment, but after scouring the state and offering bounties was able to obtain only one. Even professors of the school have turned groundhog hunters in the hope that material for the experiment may be obtained.

INSTANT LATHER in any water....

EAGER lather. Lather that cleans each tiny pore. Lather that cleans—whether the water you use is warm or cold, hard or soft. That's what you want in a toilet soap. And you get it in Octagon.

Octagon Toilet Soap is made so well it leaps to lather in any water — even in cold. It's rich in cocoanut oil, a cleansing oil; an oil, too, that is beneficial to tender skin.

Try Octagon a few mornings. The delicate scent of the glistening white cake makes you feel pleasantly refreshed. The quick cleansing lather leaves your face and hands clean—truly refreshed. The large size, long-lasting cake is only 10¢. And each wrapper carries a coupon that is good for valuable premiums.

See if you have a "YELLOW MASK?"

Make This Simple Test. If Present, Use Dental Science's New-Found Corrective.

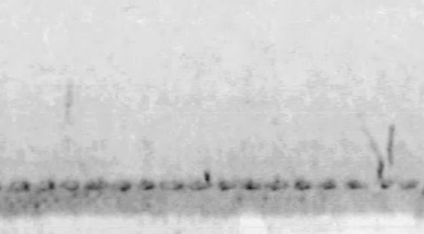
Look in your mirror. Focus your eye right on your teeth. Is the enamel a gleaming white, or is it obscured by a dismal yellowish tinge?

Of course, you don't want teeth of a yellowish hue—because that color is unbecoming, positively repellent. Nor can your teeth be free of it until you change your present dentifrice. Here are simple, convincing facts.

That "yellow mask" is caused by a "liquid cement" in your saliva. It glues to your teeth—then hardens. Tobacco, food and coffee stain this hardening mask an unlovely yellow. Ordinary dentifrices fail to remove it—because they lack the one essential substance necessary to efface it.

That substance is "Tri-Calcium Phosphate." This is a material smooth and fine as face powder that foremost dentists use to clean teeth. But dental science has just succeeded in embodying this marvelous cleaning substance in a pleasant, tasty tooth paste. Therefore, only now has it become possible for you to remove that unsightly "yellow mask" and gain teeth beauty that fairly dazzles in its whiteness.

The name of this remarkable dentifrice is ORPHOS TOOTH PASTE. Try it! Banish that unwelcome "yellow mask." Regain that glistening, lustrous whiteness that nature first bestowed on you. Safely, too—because "Tri-Calcium Phosphate" cannot harm the softest enamel. Get your first tube today—or mail coupon below for 20-time Tube FREE.



The Tri-Calcium Phosphate Does It!

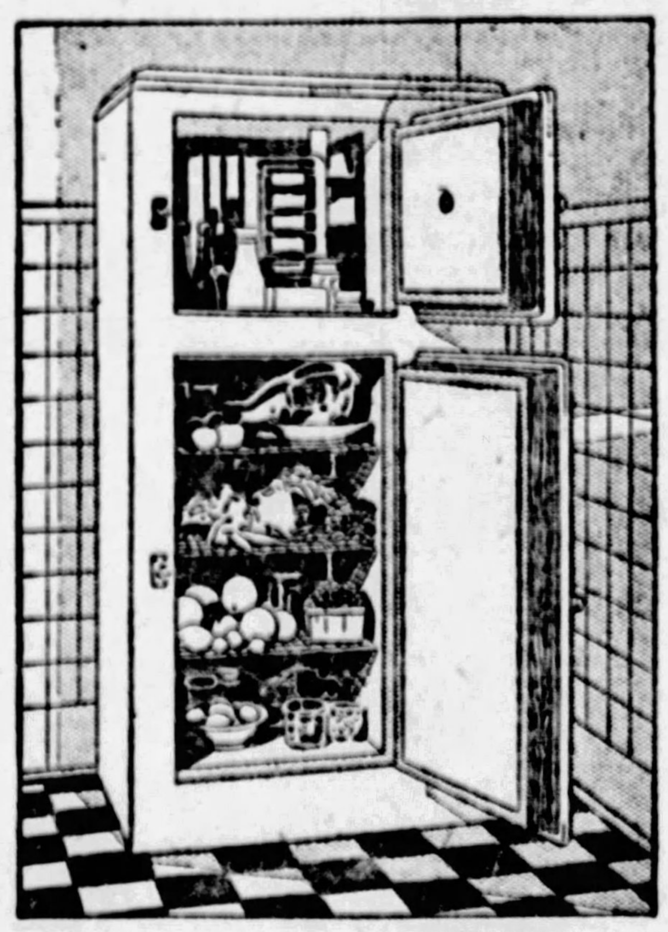
These new, marvelous

Gas Refrigerators



They operate on a tiny gas flame . . . the refrigerating liquid alternately is expanded to a vapor and condensed into a liquid again . . . This refrigerating liquid is buried in metal . . . hidden away forever . . . cannot leak . . . never needs replacement.

Many, many years from now . . . your GAS REFRIGERATOR will maintain its unequalled chilling action . . . practically no parts that wear . . . no compressor . . . no oiling to do . . . nothing to replace . . . there is no hum . . . no noise . . . no vibration . . . absolutely silent.

First cost is last cost . . . and the cost of operation is astoundingly low . . . come see these wonders of science . . . tested in several years' constant operation. One is yours for a small down payment . . . pay the balance monthly with your gas bill.

Positions (part time or permanent) are EXTREMELY SIMPLE in pleasant surroundings and most congenial atmosphere.

Do not confuse this ad with another of similar wording, for YOU WILL NOT BE ASKED TO SELL ANYTHING AND YOU CAN EARN FROM THE MOMENT YOU START.

This is REAL. This is GENUINE. Here is an opportunity to earn a REAL BANK ACCOUNT during your spare time. The work is extremely simple and can be done by anyone of ordinary intelligence and we will make you understand and know you can do the work before we ask you to start.

You must understand this is an unusual opportunity. Come and get the facts. We require white applicants over 25 years of age AND EVERYONE will be given utmost consideration.

This ad will appear until FRIDAY EVENING and none will be considered after 8:30 O'CLOCK Friday evening. Make up your mind NOW to answer on time. NO APPLICANTS RECEIVED AT ANY OTHER HOUR.

APPLY FRIDAY EVENING, OCT. 7, at 8:30 O'CLOCK, SUITE 601 CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING, SEVENTH AVENUE AND SMITHFIELD STREET.

Notice! Remember this is an entirely new department and here is your opportunity to get a position in it. Scores of new applicants have been given employment during the evenings or after business hours and even the office boy earns $35 per week. Many of our employes who are employed otherwise during the daytime have bought new cars and have opened new bank accounts as a result of this wonderful extra income opportunity. You can answer other ads every day of the week, but—remember you can only answer this ad Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

YOU SIMPLY CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS IT. Knowing how and why means EXTRA MONEY. Now if you really desire to open a REAL BANK ACCOUNT, DON'T MISS THIS. Do not answer this ad unless you are really sincere and anxious to earn an extra income. We will receive no applicants after 8:30 o'clock Friday evening, so make up your mind to answer on time REGARDLESS OF PRESENT EMPLOYMENT. EVERYONE WILL BE GIVEN FULLEST CONSIDERATION AT ABOVE TIME, AND REMEMBER THE PLACE.

MONEY for you at home; men and women can earn $15 to $25 a week in spare time writing showcards; no canvassing or soliciting; we instruct you and supply you with work; write today. The Menhenitt Company, Limited, 129 Dominion Bldg., Toronto, Can.

MEN—Become fireman, brakeman, colored train or sleeping car porters; experience unnecessary. $150-$250 month. Good results. Write Inter. Ry., Dept. 66, Indianapolis, Ind.

WANTED
LADIES, AMBITIOUS,
Work Evenings or Spare Time.
A NEW PROJECT

makes it possible for this amazing opportunity and forces us to open several new departments, in which we will be able to use hundreds of employes. You should earn $40 per week minimum. This is your spare time extra pay check. You are suitable whether employed or unemployed if white and over 25 years of age. Read every word carefully—investigate. You cannot afford to pass up the greatest opportunity in Pittsburgh today. The work is extremely simple and will not conflict with your present employment and you will not be asked to sell anything. This is your opportunity. Positively no experience required. Many people in Pittsburgh today are earning a greater remuneration in their spare hours than they do at their regular occupation. We have a systematized method of placing you in a position to EARN EXTRA MONEY WITHOUT ASKING YOU TO SELL. We do not ask you for more than ONE HOUR of your spare time each day. You will understand the work before we ask you to start. You can do this work because it is simple, yet pleasant, congenial and dignified. These positions can be filled by housewives, teachers, nurses, business ladies, and office workers DURING THE EVENING AFTER BUSINESS HOURS. This is genuine, and you are not just taking a chance. We are offering you a real OPPORTUNITY. You simply cannot afford to pass up a real money making opportunity. WE DO NOT ASK YOU TO SELL, and you can earn immediately a substantial extra pay check for your spare time. Stop worrying and start "working" at chasing "Rainbows." YOU SHOULD EARN $40 PER WEEK MINIMUM. Those who seriously desire to better themselves financially and otherwise can get almost any kind of work at any time, but we can assure you this you cannot expect an opportunity like this to be offered for a very long time. COME AND LEARN MORE ABOUT THE WORK. We have a bonus plan that will mean independence to real workers, which means a wonderful vacation, a new car, or a real bank account. This plan is for those women who are ambitious and have the will power and the determination to desire to get somewhere in this world. COME AND LEARN HOW TO MAKE EXTRA MONEY. You will not need to answer any other ads to increase your earning power. There are many women whom you will meet at our offices who answered an ad similar to this some few years ago, who are now independent. We have women who have served in their spare hours an average of $30 per week. MAKE UP YOUR MIND TO ANSWER. Be prompt. This ad will appear until Friday evening only, Oct. 7. We want only earnest and sincere workers. No one will be considered after Friday evening.

APPLY FRIDAY EVENING, OCT. 7, AT 8:30 P. M. SHARP, ROOM 601, CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BLDG., SEVENTH AND SMITHFIELD ST.

Remember, the new departments which we are forced to open have been brought about by the amazing facts and the tremendous demands of this stupendous project. Many of our new employes will earn from $40 to $50 per week. You clearly cannot afford to miss this real genuine opportunity. COME AND SECURE THE FACTS. You will be happy because you will not need to answer any other ads. If you are sincere and desire to have a real bank account, the luxuries that should be yours, or a new car, then COME AND EARN YOUR SPARE TIME EXTRA PAY CHECK.

Many of our present employes who have advanced and worked otherwise during the day are driving new cars and have bank accounts. Their families are happy and they have elevated themselves through this wonderful system which we have developed.

The time to apply is 8:30 o'clock Friday evening only. If you are sincere and anxious to earn an extra weekly income during your spare time. We will receive no applicants after 8:30 o'clock Friday evening. Make up your mind now to answer, be present Friday evening only—8:30 o'clock.

FULLEST CONSIDERATION WILL BE GIVEN ALL AT THIS TIME, REGARDLESS OF PRESENT EMPLOYMENT. WE WILL RECEIVE NO APPLICANTS AFTER 8:30 P. M. FRIDAY, OCT. 7.

APPLY IN PERSON, FRIDAY EVENING AT 8:30 P. M. SHARP, 601 CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BLDG.

United Engineering and Foundry Company.
Notice to Stockholders.

Annual Meeting. Special Matters.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of United Engineering and Foundry company will be held at the principal office of the company, 2314 Farmers Bank Building, corner of Fifth avenue and Wood street, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on October 25, 1927, at 10 o'clock a. m. (Eastern Standard time), at which time, in addition to the election of directors and the transaction of regular business, the following, pursuant to resolutions of the Board of Directors, duly passed at their meeting held July 26, 1927, will be submitted to the stockholders for their approval or disapproval:

First—The reduction of the authorized common capital par stock of the company from 15,000 shares to 69,553 shares and from a total par value of $7,500,000.00 to a total par value of $6,955,300.00.

Second—The conversion of the 69,553 shares of the common capital par stock into 416,118 shares of common capital stock without nominal or par value and the exchange of six shares of no par value stock for each share of the present 69,553 shares of the common capital par stock issued and outstanding.

Third—The fixing of the stated capital of the company applicable to the no par value common capital stock at $5,409,534.00.

Fourth—Authorizing the $1,525,766.00 of the capital of the company heretofore credited against the common capital par stock be omitted to surplus so that the same may be declared out in dividends from time to time at the discretion of the directors.

Fifth—The reduction of the authorized preferred capital stock of the company from 15,000 shares to 12,749 shares and from a total par value of $1,500,000.00 to a total par value of $1,274,900.00. Said 12,749 shares represent the now outstanding and issued preferred capital stock.

Sixth—Amending Article VIII, Section 2, of the By-Laws, to make the certificates for the common stock read "without nominal or par value," instead of a par value.

Copies of the foregoing resolutions to amend the By-Laws, a copy of the proposed amendments having been mailed in accordance with the By-Laws, to each stockholder.

BUGS BAER Says

THE Yanks are making the world series look like spring training. They aren't so good but the Pirates insist on playing as if they were just filling in an open date.

There is no hero of the series but Pipgras is less guilty than the rest. He threw some puzzling stuff at the Pirates while all that Vic Aldridge had was a change of pace consisting of switching from a slow lob to a wild pitch.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

Having started both games with a band playing the Star Spangled Banner, Barney Dreyfuss has asked permission to play it between innings. Barney admits that the Waner boys are doing their share, but two Waners are not enough. Barney claims he would never lose a game if Mr. and Mrs. Waner had been married five years earlier.

Babe Ruth dragged through the nine innings without getting a hit. The rest of the Yanks got 11, and made the third inning look like a jail delivery. They batted around in the third inning, scoring a bagful on four pokes and an error.

Kid Gleason predicted that because of Donie Bush being a new manager with the Pirates he would show a hesitancy in pulling out wobbly pitchers. Gleason made this statement before the series and it proved to be true in the case of Kremer and Aldridge. The relief pitchers worked fine, but the doctors arrived after the patient was dead.

This is the first time we remember that a visiting team has snatched the first two games in a hostile town. The Yanks haven't played like champions and it looks as if they will not have to.

The Pirates have been playing as if they were eating pig iron for breakfast food. Outside of the Waners they are dopey at the bat and sluggish on the bags. The rest of the team looks like orphans at a picnic.

Pipgras pitched all the baseball that was necessary. There was never more than one hit against him in one inning. And one grape ain't a bunch. Pip gave a base on balls in the eighth, but he gave it like a miser. Outside of that he wasted no effort. The Pirates will have to win two games in New York to bring the series back to Pittsburgh where Barney Dreyfuss thinks it belongs.

New York fans will get a look at the two champion teams today. The Pittsburgh fans aren't blaming anybody. They paid for their tickets and feel that it is their own fault.

Unless the Pirates start something, only two more autumn leaves have to flutter down and the series will be over.

A YOUNG woman, in Order to be devastatingly
ATTRACTIVE to men
Of worth, should be
Apparently SELF-RELIANT,
But never noticeably
SELF-SUFFICIENT.
This, of course, does not
DISCONCERT the ego that GREAT MEN never know
They POSSESS.
It is, of course, also NECESSARY that the girl
Be CULTURED, charming and Very BEAUTIFUL,
If she is given these GRACES of Mind and body,
Men of IMPORTANCE,
And men who THINK
They are important, will APPROACH her and
Bandy words with her,
And that is usually ALL.
She will GET out of Them. For CLEVER, self-reliant,
Attractive women do not Want a MAN'S MONEY,
And do not accept his LOVE unless they wish to TAKE the man for KEEPS.

Kings and the Popes

This Picture Explains Partly the Power of the Latter

LITTLE PRINCESS ELIZABETH, SHE MAY BE QUEEN

This very pretty picture of a nice little baby shows the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, granddaughter of King George and Queen Mary of England.

This child is third in the direct line of succession to the throne of Great Britain. If two should die, the Prince of Wales and her father, she would find herself sitting on the throne where Queen Victoria, her great-great-grandmother, sat in the last century; and her title would be "Queen of England and Empress of India."

She probably would make a very nice little queen—as good-natured, moral, useful and kind as the late Queen Victoria.

However, in these uncertain days nobody would wish for the child the hard work and the various possibilities of the throne.

This picture is interesting because it reminds us that the oldest throne in Europe, that of the Popes at Rome, has endured through the centuries, while others have changed and diminished in importance.

The reason is shown in this picture. The Popes were chosen for their ability, regardless of birth, rank or wealth, by the College of Cardinals, the keenest body of men that could be gathered together.

Therefore, the Pope, ruler of the great Catholic Church, has been a man selected for OUTSTANDING ABILITY.

On the other hand, kings and queens have been ACCIDENTS OF BIRTH.

Occasionally kings and queens, as in the case of the great Alexander, and Louis the Eleventh, Henry the Eighth, Queen Elizabeth, Peter the Great, Charles the Twelfth, of Sweden, William of Orange and others have shown exceptional ability.

But to rely on the accident of birth is not a strong reliance for a nation. Louis the Eleventh, the keen builder of the French Empire, was followed by the big and foolish Francis the First. And Louis the Fourteenth of France, who at least knew how to maintain his importance, was followed by the worthless Louis the Fifteenth, and he by Louis the Sixteenth, who lost his head in the French revolution.

The Cardinals select for Pope the ablest man, the man in their judgment best fitted to carry on the work that devolves upon the Popes from generation to generation.

That explains, at least in part, leaving out religious explanation, the survival and continued influence of the Papacy, with change and collapse all about it.

We're Out

Pray Heaven We STAY Out.

A Swedish Foreign Minister complains that the League of Nations doesn't do anything, plays no part worth talking about in international disputes. The League is really not a league; it is an organization dominated, quite naturally, by France and Great Britain. Those two countries, with all their protestations of friendship, are not on good terms. Their interests are not the same today any more than they were when Louis the Sixteenth was decorating John Paul Jones because he sank British ships.

The League of Nations doesn't do anything of importance because its bosses cannot AGREE on anything of importance.

Be grateful that this country is OUT of it, in spite of the efforts of sloppy sentimentalists and grasshopper "statesmen" to force the United States in. We're out, thank heaven, may we STAY out.

Living Stays Up

Government reports from 32 cities show that the dollar doesn't get much stronger in buying power.

Food is still up 58 per cent over 1913; clothing, 64 per cent; rent, 62 per cent; fuel and light, 80 per cent; house furnishing goods, 105 per cent.

There's only one little bright spot for the embattled family provider—electricity has dropped. But maybe you burn gas!

Brown October Days -:- By T. E. Powers

Garrett P Serviss Says:

The Evolution Dispute

I DO not wish to say that there is trouble in the evolution camp, being a follower of that flag myself. But it is useless to deny that a little raising of voices and sharpening of phrases have been noticed there, and one or two brushes have occurred, causing a certain pricking up of ears among interested outsiders, and a general awakening of spirits, with some jeering, among the inmates of the opposite camp.

I referred to this matter not long ago in calling attention to an outspoken address made by Dr. William K. Gregory, of the American Museum of Natural History, on the subject of the "two views" now held by scientific leaders on the question of the origin of man. The "nigger in the woodpile," is the anthropoid ape. At the mere suggestion that the ape is ancestrally related to man the Bible "fundamentalists" go into fits. They regard such a thought as disgraceful to man and an outrage on the Creator.

During the first stirrings of the anti-evolution war, the scientific riposte generally took the form of the statement that no direct decent of man from ape was affirmed, the relation between the two being that both had had a common ancestor at a remote geologic period. But at length Professor Osborn rather surprised some of his readers, who had not followed closely all the details of his investigations, and understood their trend, by rejecting the ape theory of man's origin altogether, and picturing our beginning from a race of "dawn men," who were "erect-walking, plain-living, large-brained, speaking men, totally dissociated from the family of the apes."

The signs of discord in expert opinion became conspicuous when, last June, Dr. Gregory's attack was published, assailing Prof. Osborn's argument, "in so far as it is based upon his studies of mammals other than primates, as a series of analogies unsupported by direct evidence and outweighed by many definite facts of record," disputing the similar opinions of other paleontologists, and winding up with the statement that "from such analogies has been conjured the Eocene Dawn Man—a colossal anachronism some forty million years ahead of his time in the world's history." Dr. Gregory proclaimed himself a defender of the "unpopular" view of Darwin, Huxley, Haeckel and others that the "highly varied Mid-Tertiary anthropoid stock" was the "common human-anthropoid source."

Notwithstanding the pacifists, human nature loves even the semblance of a fight, and these decided words looked to some like blows, though delivered with softened gloves. And now we come to the September meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, where Sir Arthur Keith, in his presidential address, took up the cudgels for Darwinism undefiled, and placed himself by the side of the defenders of the ape-man hypothesis.

This is going to have a wide reverberation in and out of the scientific world, and all readers would do well to brush up their knowledge of the whole subject of evolution and its connections. But the opponents of the doctrine of human evolution will make a sad mistake if they jump to the conclusion that because a difference of opinion exists among its advocates the theory on which it is based is in danger of collapse. That theory, in its essentials, is every year more and more strongly supported by new discoveries. Whether our race began as an offshoot of an extinct stock which in Tertiary times separated into different lines, one eventuating in man and the other in apes; or whether we are such an "auld family," and so stuck up from the beginning, that our race has never recognized any affinity to such climbing creatures as apes and monkeys, the scientifically unquestionable fact remains that the manner of man's physical origin did not differ from that of the rest of the animal creation. But evidently the discussion about the exact way, or form, in which it did begin is going to be most interesting, and perhaps even exciting.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY.

Overrating

OFTEN you wish you might meet with a crowd of persons whose tastes and ideals were reciprocal with your requirements for friends.

There is this or that about every one that is distasteful, or at least not agreeable to you.

Because you cannot find the crowd you want to hold yourself aloof from those who might afford you pleasure.

You expect too much—more than you are willing to give.

Instead of adapting yourself to others you want others to conform to your ideas.

Perfection does not exist and you are wasting your time.

You have faults yourself but you seek those without faults.

You are missing a lot of pleasure by not mingling with those around you, who might be more willing to make allowances for you than you have been to accept their short-comings.

It might surprise you if you would take a little time to think it over, to discover that you are not so much superior after all, and not entitled to a position of even ordinary popularity.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Life's Ways

THERE are ways that are glowing with banners, with men's plaudits resounding and loud, where the brave and the great reap their harvest in the tumult and cheers of the crowd. There are ways that are lofty and lonely, ways the seers and the sages have trod, that lead up from earth's endless confusion to the peace and perfection of God.

But the ways that make humble hearts happy, that lend brightness no trials can stain, are the sweet, quiet ways where we walk with a friend to the notes of love's tender refrain, ways too low for the great and the mighty, ways too dear for the saint and the seer, but these ways men love best of all ways in the world; humble ways with a friend walking near!

This Way Out

SHE was seated upon a low settee. Her hair was golden bronze, drawn from her forehead, and arranged upon the nape of her neck. Her eyes, violet and provocative beneath the pencil-stripe brows, were shaded with sweeping black lashes, and her mouth was full and red. Her daring evening frock exposed shoulders and back of exquisite whiteness.

"Darling," he breathed; "will you marry me?"

"Marry you!" she exclaimed, amazed. "Why, you couldn't keep me in hair-pins!"

"Yes, yes, I know, darling," he moaned; "but you could bob your hair!"

Ye Towne Gossip

by K. C. B.

IN A department store.

WHERE I had been sent.

TO GET some yarn.

FOR MAKING a rug.

I SAID to the man.

IN THE cutaway coat.

"WHERE DO I go.

"TO GET some yarn?"

AND THE man said to me.

"YOU MEAN some wool?"

AND I said to him.

"WHATEVER IT is.

"YOU THINK I mean.

"THAT'S WHAT it is.

"IT'S TO make a rug.

"AND WHEN I was a boy.

"IT USED to be yarn.

"AS IN darning socks.

"AND, ANYWAY.

"WHAT'S THE idea.

"OF BRINGING that up?"

AND THE man he smiled.

AND SAID to me.

"OH, I don't know.

"I DON'T feel well."

AND WHAT with that.

WE BOTH of us laughed.

AND HE took my arm.

TO THE elevator.

AND SAID to the girl.

"LET THE gentleman out.

"AT THE second floor."

WHICH she promised she would.

AND SHE did.

AND IN the department.

WHERE THEY sold the yarn.

FOR MAKING rugs.

THERE WERE many women.

SITTING AROUND.

AND LEARNING how.

WAS A middle-aged man.

WITH A rug half finished.

AND POKING away.

WITH HIS little jabbed.

AND NEVER looking.

AT ANYONE.

AND I said to the woman.

WHO SOLD the yarn.

AND SAID it softly.

FOR THE man was sitting.

QUITE CLOSE to us.

"ARE THERE very many men.

"WHO MAKE these rugs?"

AND SHE whispered back.

"YOU'RE ABOUT the seventh.

"THAT'S BEEN here today."

AND SHE was so nice.

AND SYMPATHETIC.

THAT I said nothing.

AND JUST took my package.

AND WALKED down stairs.

SO THE elevator girl.

WOULDN'T SEE me with it.

I THANK you.

Isn't It So?

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Thoughts while strolling: Thos late breakfasters idling at hotel dining room windows. A truck man roars hot epithets at a policeman. And a young man—t la—tucks a handkerchief into his cuff. That candy shop wit marble window cupid surrounded by brocaded boxes of bon bo Run by a Negro.

And those expansive showrooms. With open firepla Mounted trophies. Long tables, high-backed chairs and paintings. Charles Hanson Town, the editor poet. More sm horse carriages. Carrying those hard and glittering diamo like ladies. Who seem to see nothing around them.

A turn up a mean street. Vice that has left old age with ugly leer. The odor of hops and juniper. Lunch rooms feat ing pie and goulash for breakfast. A Chinese walking with a gold-toothed blonde. Prize fight posters—Slug Riley vs. Goof O'Toole. Low foreheads. Stubby pompadours. Dim pool halls.

A cafeteria offers a cabaret. A taxi hits a patrol wagon. No damage. A fellow tells fellow loungers: "Yeah, he rapped a big bank solo." That means a holdup. A man with shaggy sandy eyebrows whistling from "Carmen" while scaling fish. Inert women leaning against doorways.

What became of the swagger stick? A pickle and chow chow store. Soon time for persimmons. Youthful lookout for a sidewalk dice game. Rooms to let "without cooking privileges." Wonder where a man learns to play bass drum.

An auction sale of bronzes. Blue and pink fronted tea rooms. Boy athletes in white running pants. The quiet of Greenwich Village. The official green lamps in front of Mayor Walker's home in St. Luke's place. A modest residence in a modest street. The last stand of the shutter.

Italian women with bulging hem bundles and rings in their ears. Soap box pests who talk Bolshevism and wear a flag in their buttonhole. Roaming long-haired sketch artists in smocks. The old Black Cat restaurant. Cellar theaters and cellar dives.

A study in contemplation was noted along a quiet Greenwich Village street. It might have graced a pastel—"Tex Rickard Walks Along." The promoter with his head hurled deep in his shoulders and puffing a black cigar moved turtle-like along the sidewalk seemingly lost in revery. This is perhaps where Mr. Rickard does his heavy thinking. He likes people far away as you may have viewed at any of his prize fights.

* * *

Tex Rickard is, in many ways, most glamorous sporting figure in metropolis. He has the background of a turbulent past in hell-roaring mining camps. Scandal has hit him hard. He has moments of saturnine humor with close friends, but to the public he has a sphinx-like manner that stirs a love of mystery. He has gambled high and usually won. It is said to love fine paintings and is devoted to penny dreadful literature. He knows the value of keeping people guessing and has achieved more free publicity, than any man in America. Until recently Rickard never spent a cent to advertise his various attractions in the newspapers. Some day newspapers will awaken to the fact that space for sport news is out of proportion to interest. Then Mr. Rickard will have to advertise.

Another old god who is graying is John J. McGraw. I saw him in front of a theatrical club the other afternoon, resembling for all the world one of those crisp and alert Wall street financiers. He is far removed from the scrapping "Muggsy" of name he now dominates of the old Baltimore Orioles days. His voice is modulated and his dress has become sedate. He looks as though he might even be handy with the tea cup.

Common Sense and Prohibition

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Senator Glass stopped the argument recently between Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Ritchie as they were discussing Prohibition by the remark:

"Anyone is a fool who thinks that the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed in the next 100 years. What has Prohibition got to do with the presidential election anyway? Let those Democrats who want to agitate for a modification of the Volstead Act do it by voting for wet Congressmen. Congress, not the President, must vote on any such modification."

Criticism has often been passed upon the two great parties because they have not made the wet and dry campaign an issue. It has no business being an issue. We are a dry country, supposedly, because Congress has voted it and the Legislatures of the States have ratified it.

We continue to be a quasi-dry country because there are more dry Congressmen than wet.

It was a clever move when the Prohibitionists quit having a national party and concentrated their efforts upon electing dry Congressmen. It will be a mistake whenever they quit that method.

Criticism has been made of the Anti-Saloon League because it dictates who shall be the various officers of the government. This dictation, however, simply means that it insists that the men who enforce the laws must be in favor of these laws and must be honest and reliable. There is nothing unethical or dangerous in a company or an organization that is formed for securing good officials and trustworthy.

There is a free country. Elect enough wet Congressmen and get enough wet Legislatures and you can repeal the Volstead law or the Constitutional Amendment any time you want to.

This is a representative government, a republic and not a democracy. The will of the people is determined by the kind of people they elect to office to make their laws. Just elect a different kind of people and select wets instead of drys and you can change things soon.

Every effort to defeat the prohibition amendment by some other method than this is contrary to our scheme of government.

No matter how much individuals localities may fret and fume, the prohibition amendment is going to stay on the statute books as long as the duly selected law-makers choose it to stay. If you want that amendment taken off the statute books elect a different kind of law-makers. That is the gist of the whole matter.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Insults are like bad coins; we cannot help their being offered to us but we need not take them.
—Spurgeon.

A thorough conviction of the difference of men is the great thing to be assured of in social knowledge.
—Helps.

He that defers his charity until he is dead, is, if a man weighs it rightly, rather liberal of another man's than of his own.
—Bacon.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

DURING the five years of experimenting with the new type battery, many purchasers of the original type came back with orders for more cells. They said they were entirely satisfied. Edison said he was not and would not sell them. He could not be moved from his determination until the new battery was ready.

NICKEL flake, an invention in itself, was Edison's ingenious solution of the problem which had baffled him so many years. Nickel flake is a remarkable product. It is made first in sheets. Two hundred sheets are about as thick as a visiting card. The flakes are so thin that they will float in air like thistle-down.

WHEN Edison invented his storage battery he intended it for use in trucks, passenger automobiles and street-cars. The public has not taken very kindly to electric automobiles, but electric trucks are used to a considerable extent in large cities. In New York City street cars using Edison batteries ran for several years.

EDISON had not thought of his battery being used in submarines, but it turned out to be just the thing for that purpose. Lead and acid batteries were objectionable and sometimes dangerous because of the sulphuric acid fumes given off when submerged. The Edison battery overcame these objections. (Continued tomorrow.)
